ABOUT:

Morimoto Kunio, president of the Kan-ou-Kan, is a master instructor of the Musō Shinden Eishin-Ryu tradition of Iai Heiho (Iaijutsu), Oishi Shinkage-Ryu school of Kenjutsu, and Shibukawa Ichi-Ryu style of Jujutsu. Morimoto Sensei also served as an officer in the Japanese Self-Defense Air Force, and holds the rank of 7th-Dan and Kyoshi in both Jukendo (Japanese style bayonet fighting) and Tankendo (Japanese style short sword fighting—the short sword is a detached bayonet from a rifle).

He began his practice of Muso Shinden Eishin-Ryu Iai Heiho at the age of 13, under the tutelage of Umemoto Mitsuo Sensei. In 1997, Umemoto Mitsuo Sensei left a will to pass the school on to Morimoto Sensei. Morimoto Sensei studied Oishi Shinkage-Ryu under Oishi Eiichi Soke, the 6th Headmaster. He was Oishi Sensei's most senior student and received full transmission of the school (Menkyo Kaiden). Morimoto Sensei also studied Shibukawa Ichi-Ryu Jujutsu under Une Shigemi, 4th Soke, and was appointed as legitimate successor of this school by Shigemi Soke before his death.

In 1995, Morimoto Sensei founded the Kan-ou-Kan organization to protect, and preserve these three traditions. Morimoto Sensei is recognized by the Association of Traditional Japanese Martial Arts (Nihon Kobudo Kyokai) and the Association for the Promotion of Traditional Japanese Martial Arts (Nihon Kobudo Shinkokai) as the legitimate successor to, and head of Muso Shinden Eishin-Ryu Iai Heiho and Shibukawa Ichi-Ryu Jujutsu. He and his students perform at their official demonstrations held at the Nippon Budokan and the Meiji Shrine. Further, Morimoto Sensei is an executive board member of the Nihon Kobudo Shinkokai.

In addition to studying and teaching classical Japanese martial arts, he also studies the history of Budo (Japanese martial arts), and is a member of the Japanese Academy of Budo. He is a director of the Chugoku and Shikoku Branch, and holds a Master's Degree in Japanese Martial Arts History.

This is an open seminar; beginners to advanced students are all welcome to attend. Attendees may bring a bokken (wooden sword), or use one of the dojo bokken if they do not own their own or an iaito.
