

Excerpt from “Stimme der Wassermannzeit” (“Voice of the Aquarian Age”)
#146, pp. 1 – 3

To be of equal value...

If I meet strangers or if I converse with familiar people or in some other way have to deal with them, then I do this exclusively at the level of human being to human being.

On this level there is no difference between emperors, kings, managers, bosses, workers and beggars etc., because basically a human being is firstly a human being who wants to and must be treated this way and be respected.

Thus in this respect, thoughts and feelings play the most important role, because genuine, true, honest and reverent thoughts and feelings are ever more important in each case, than status.

Each person – myself as well – is a simple being, who through his consciousness-related training as well as through his knowledge, his experiences and living those, can develop a certain wisdom and from this in turn in a certain way a new insight and attitude.

This is nothing special, however it determines the course of life – and success or failure.

Doubtlessly there are people who have enjoyed a better upbringing than me, have collected more experiences, and experienced these more intensely than me, and certainly they also have a much larger potential in order to change themselves internally than I ever did or do possess.

Nevertheless I have done what was possible for me – even though when in so doing I have neglected a lot.

But also I am a human being, a simple one, who does not want to be elevated above others and who does not consider himself any more than everyone else can be considered.

I was born into a simple family and was entrusted even as a small boy with a responsibility of incredible magnitude, incomprehensible to earth humans, to learn, teach and to spread, as an intermediary and messenger with regard to creational lawfulness, the truth and the teaching of the spirit as well as the teaching of life.

However, this did not and does not make me something special and also does not place me above my fellow-men, because they and I are equal as people/human beings.

All people should recognize the great inner potential which they possess, and utilize it for themselves with positive self-confidence and greater effort, in order to truly change within, to make himself of equal value with the next.

And everyone can do this, if he only wants it. It therefore is a matter of concentrating less upon the negative sides, when life seems a little bit joyless, difficulties arise and everything threatens to go wrong.

In fact, more of the positive sides of existence must be seen and the positive inner potential be utilized, then everybody will surely succeed with some effort, toil and positive will.

Only this guarantees a certain success, and when all one's energy and all qualities of a true human are used, all problems and worries as well as all suffering and pain can also be overcome.

With reference to the relationship with fellow men it is crucial that a healthy consciousness-related and positive overall mental attitude prevails, because this is fundamentally the key to true happiness and well-being.

This is a rule which applies to all people equally, no matter whether they have turned to knowledge or faith/belief, ignorance or skepticism, because it is only important that they are upright, honest human beings.

Truly it also plays no role whether they are healthy or ill, poor or rich, clever or stupid, because it is only important that they use their inner positive potential and their prosperity in the right way as well as having pleasant equal relationships with their fellow men.

The origin of true human happiness lies not in inequality, but in the equality of person/human being to person/human being and with it the correct attitude and use of the positive inner potential.

Billy

There is no human being who is less important than any other; so the most humble – in the limits of his capability – is also the best in all of his abilities, skills and inclinations.

Wednesday, 12th January, 2005, 17.22 o'clock, Semjase-Silver-Star-Center - Billy

All humans must themselves be everything and also of the highest quality. So he must accomplish specifically the greatest achievements, because only by doing that, can he fathom the source of his own powers and his abilities as well as possibilities within himself and be master of himself.

Wednesday, 26th January, 2005, 00.23 o'clock Semjase-Silver-Star-Center - Billy