

Rye Brothers Take Over the Southwest

Posted on October 16, 2015 by Kendra Beltran in Coming Up Listing

The only artist I've seen in the past couple of months have dates well into 2016 is Janet Jackson. The pop icon will be 50 when her latest world tour comes to an end, but you know who is creeping up behind her in terms of dates? Rye Brothers from Norco, CA. They may not be as nasty as Ms. Jackson, but they've been making some noise across the southwest with their Country ways that take a little from bluegrass and a bit from Americana.

A country band at heart, the four men who make up Rye Brothers weren't just influenced by that. One listen and show in and you'll know very well that these guys have a lot of rock and roll in their blood. Their high energy on stage can be likened to the early days of Aerosmith and even Cheap Trick. It's no wonder venues from California through Nevada and even in Arizona are quick to book these guys.

The guys are on a little break right now, but are picking things right back up in San Bernardino on October 22 with a few nights at Brandin' Iron Saloon. From there they'll head to Nevada and back and forth between there and California throughout the rest of the year. Come 2016 they'll be doing that again, but adding Arizona to the mix. You can check out all the Rye Brothers' dates here and catch them on one of their many upcoming dates.
