Domestic Violence And the Christian Community

"Victims of crime often experience a crisis in faith. How religious leaders respond to their needs can be either a help or a hindrance in healing." (Delaplane, 2001).

•Church members of an evangelical church reported having been abused at a rate of 74% for females and 69% for males. (Christman, 2008).

•Research studies show no significant difference in prevalence rates of IPV (intimate partner violence) in religious communities compared to the general population. (Battaglia, 2001)

•Women in faith communities tend to turn to their clergy, pastors, or religious leaders for help, thus raising the issue of preparedness of clergy for this task.

•There is a "lack of training within the communities as well as the need for culturally sensitive training materials and models that consider the role of religion and spirituality." (Stennis, 2015)

•Members of faith communities experience IPV as perpetrators as well as survivors and the impact of intimate partner violence is systemic. (Stennis. 2015)

Domestic Violence is probably the number one Pastoral mental health emergency"
- Andrews Weaver, PhD

- Jesus tells us that treatment is found in Him and is administered by the church.

"When one of you has a grievance against another, does he dare go to law before the unrighteous instead of the saints?" (1 Cor. 6:1-2).
