To Whom It May Concern:

In my 41-year career, I found our professional specifications writers to be among the most important contributors to our firm's success. I welcome this opportunity regarding my experience with Allen Fuller.

As former President and Chairman of RLF (an Architecture, Engineering and Interior Design firm) and subsequently as a consultant to the firm after retirement, I worked directly with Allen in areas of professional specifications services and associated architectural detailing. I observed him in technical, personnel relations, and social situations; further in conversations about family and personal values.

Allen's work with RLF included a range of building types; healthcare, various housing and personal welfare facilities for the Department of Defense, education, religious facilities, and most recently as a consultant to me on a residential addition. I found Allen's work to be superlative in all respects. He exhibited a willingness to perform any needed task, a thoroughness and depth which went beyond what would normally be expected or received. Yet, his work was always completed in a timely and enthusiastic manner.

Equally important, throughout our working association, Allen exhibited a strong combination of work ethic, intuition, steadfastness, family values and character traits which would be a credit to any organization.

In short, I cannot give Allen a stronger recommendation. Please call me at (407) 538-8920 if you have more specific questions in areas which I may not have addressed.

Sincerely,

John H. Rogers, FAIA
