

NEVADA GOP WORKS WITH THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TO REPORT CAUCUS NIGHT RESULTS

GOP Caucus Results to be Released Exclusively through AP

LAS VEGAS – The Nevada Republican Party announced The Associated Press (AP) will exclusively deliver results for the February 23rd, “First in the West” Nevada GOP Caucus. Results will be reported directly to AP from the Nevada Republican Party.

Nevada Republican Caucus results will first be reported to the State Party by each of the 17 counties after their caucuses conclude that evening. Caucus times vary by county, with all caucuses concluding by 9 PM Pacific Standard Time. Following the conclusion of each meeting, each precinct will report its results to the site location manager. Multiple precincts may have their caucus located at the same site. The site location managers will tally the results from the presidential preference poll and report them to their respective county parties and the Nevada Republican Party via telephone and photo confirmation. A smartphone picture of the tally sheet will be sent to the party.

Results will be compiled and reviewed by the party, and shared with AP. As the news organization inserts the results into its election system, it will share any data issues with the party. Results that are successfully inserted will be transmitted to AP’s newspaper and broadcast members, and from there to the public.

Upon physical receipt of all county tallies, the Nevada Republican Party Secretary will consolidate and certify the county and state totals.

A livefeed of the results as they are reported through AP will be available to members of the media at the Nevada GOP media filing center at the South Point Casino.

Founded in 1846, AP is the essential global news network, delivering fast, unbiased news from every corner of the world to all media platforms and formats. AP also operates an elections service that historically has provided election night results to an array of broadcasters, newspapers and websites. On the Web: www.AP.org