A note from Rick: A nice rebound in markets this week after last weeks sluggish prices. The slaughter cow and calf markets both regained some of last weeks losses but still not quite where they were a month ago. This is a positive sign, in my opinion, as we are into the heart of summertime and fair season. These markets are traditionally flat and sluggish during this time and although we've lost a little it doesn't look like we're going to go through as big of a lull as we sometimes do. Dairy cattle and feeders have remained steady for the most part and I don't see any big changes in the near future in these markets. There is still a lot of uncertainty regarding feed prices and I look for that to continue for the near term. The sheep and goat markets have been more active recently and prices have been very strong. Looks like we're finally going to break out of this rainy weather pattern and that will give a much needed opportunity to get some hay made along with finishing up the wheat and straw harvest. Be safe and we hope to see you soon at TLA!
