

TIMELESS THEATRE

By Karina Kozuska

I have always felt different. A loner. Even in old childhood video footage you could see I wasn't one of the gang and kept to myself. I felt I didn't fit in with the rest of the human race and it continued through to adulthood. It wasn't until recent years that I discovered there was a name for what I felt and thought, and I was quite amazed to learn I wasn't the only one, in fact there is literally thousands of us Empaths.

From the perspective of an Empath, I'd like to tell you a little bit about my experience at the Vernon Towne Theater, in Vernon, BC. This is where my husband Jon and I filmed an episode for our show True North Paranormal.

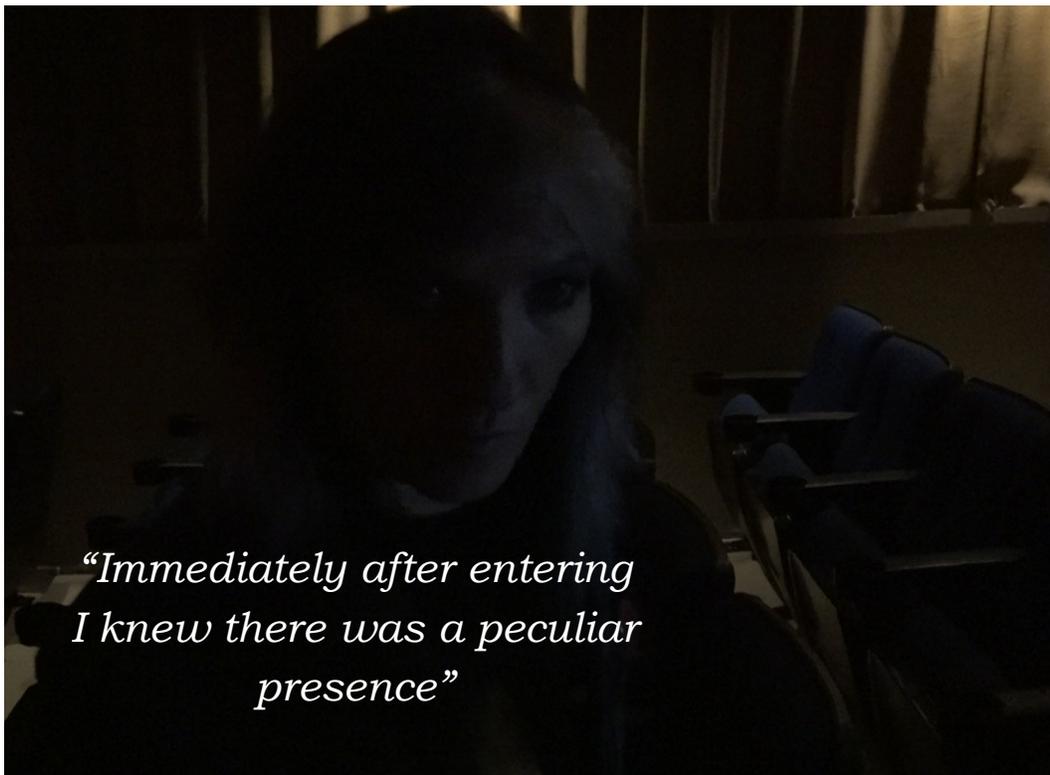

Entering this location was a little like entering a theatrical museum of sorts; a step back in time. Everything from the old movie posters on the wall right down to the old light fixtures. Immediately after entering I knew there was a peculiar presence and we were not leaving empty handed. And little did we know that even our daytime tour was going to provide us with some action.

Gerry who is the current owner greeted us with warmth along with his daughter Hailee who gave us the grand tour. Gerry spoke to us of some of his experiences, at times, with unease, as did Hailee. At this point I'm hoping that we can make the theatre a little more comfortable for them to work in.

I had a feeling that the ghost that was known as Lloyd (a previous owner) that was said to roam the theatre, was not going to let us down. I somehow felt that he was a hard man to please and was very strict and set in his ways. He also came from a different era, he looked at women as being inferior, which didn't sit right with me at all. I also felt that he seemed a touch annoyed that we were even there.... I say BRING IT.

*“Immediately after entering
I knew there was a peculiar presence”*

So, as we toured this beautiful theatre on a dark and rainy October day, I received a few different impressions of past experiences. I will have to be somewhat tight-lipped about this as the episode has not yet aired. But I will say that because of how strong our day-time experiences were, I knew we were in for quite the night.

We experienced a little bit of everything, residual energies that were from a happy playful time long ago as well as the good old unexplainable battery drain. And we cannot forget the in-your-face, scare the pants off Kent, the cameraman moments. Those are priceless. It got even better when our other cameraman Dean, jumped up an entire aisle at once, after another theatre seat slammed down without explanation.

So, after a night of one bizarre occurrence after another, we collected all our cameras, packed up all the equipment and said our goodbyes.

We couldn't have asked for two better hosts than Gerry and Hailee. The Vernon Towne Theater is a classy place to take your family to a movie and the atmosphere is thick with entertainment from another time. You never know...so check twice to make sure the person who collects your ticket is still there after you turn around...

Karina Kozuska is a paranormal investigator, empath and also Host of True North Paranormal.

“So check twice to make sure the person who collects your ticket is still there”

