Here is what I'm thinking...

Actually, this month I'd really like to know what you are thinking. We have been sharing a new experience with our "Message" time and I am interested in how it has been for you. I have gotten a lot of positive feedback from people who are enjoying it and that is great. I wonder if some of you are not appreciating it as much and are just shy about telling me. Let me hear how it is working for you. Personally, I am really having fun with it. I get to hear some of the things you would normally be saying under your breath while I am preaching. You bring great insights and questions that enrich our experience and understanding of the scriptures and customize our discussion to fit our real lives. So keep it up!! Your attendance and participation is what is giving the message life.

Because I am going to conference and I have an 11 month contract, I will not be leading worship part of July and most of August. Fortunately for you all, we arranged for really thoughtful and interesting speakers on those Sunday's that I will be gone. On July 12, Cliff Kindy will share from his first hand experience living and working with the oppressed people in Nigeria. July 26, Murray Cox will be introducing us to a version of Quaker worship. August 2, Bev and Joel Eikenberry will dialogue on the different, sometimes conflicting, understandings of God they bring to their faith and marriage. August 9, Rachel Gross will invite us to consider the theological implications of the lullabies we sing to our children. August 16, I will be back to invite you to participate in a discussion of the sixth commandment, "You Shall not murder." August 23, Helen Beery leads us through using scripture to go deeper in prayer. And finally, on August 30 our Annual Conference Delegate, Laurie Kieffaber Cornett, will share the joys and struggles of our denomination to be faithful to our calling to continue the work of Jesus, peacefully, simply, and together.

So here's what I'm thinking...It is going to be a great summer of creative sharing and meaningful worship!! And don't forget, if you absolutely have to miss a Sunday, you can catch a recording of it at your convenience on our church website. (If you have questions, Michelle Roudebush has all the answers.) So come and be feed the fruits of faith and thought!

Blessings,

Kay

On August 23, 2015 the Y will be holding the Togetherhood, Day of Service. This is where we gather over 400 volunteers to go into the community and complete projects for organizations in Wabash.

Last year we painted, moved furniture, picked sweet corn, packaged bathroom items, visited skilled care facilities..... among a multitude of other things.

Consider how our church might participate in this community event.

Growing Grounds

Volunteer for a Heart-Warming, Eye-Opening, Frustrating, Much-Needed and Appreciated Experience with Single Parents, Precious Children, and Families Who Call to Growing Grounds (GG)

This article is a call-out for volunteers who might help on occasion with folks we are placing through Growing Grounds, plus a glimpse into the life of those people in transition. When the cell phone call comes, the need is usually for shelter as some emergency in employment, health, or relationship has occurred, and the people are at risk of being on the street-usually with children. The first step may be to get them housed at a motel while working quickly to find an apartment to rent. Of course, the better scenario would be to have an emergency shelter in Wabash County, but we have none. If a decent and affordable apartment can be found, the initial deposit and/or rent is paid to the landlord, sometimes in full and sometimes in a shared arrangement with the family. Then, the case development, or "walking with", often continues. This is where you could come in. The following real life situation will show how you could be helpful - and the need.

The mother of a two-year-old made contact when one of the nearly 30 churches she had called about housing referred her to GG. The landlord from another state was forcing folks out of living spaces and since she, her toddler and fiancé had just moved to Wabash following an emergency in another town, they did not know where to turn. The man had a temp job, but no pay check for a week. (Fortunately, the company was hiring and he now is working full time at minimum wage with mandatory overtime and weekends. Often, the scenario is that maybe one person in the family can get a part-time, minimum-wage job which does not begin to cover rent, utilities etc.) GG gave the frantic mother a list of landlords and she started calling about openings. In the meantime, the family was housed at a motel for two nights with all of us wondering how long this expense would need to continue. After hearing about and looking at a couple apartments that were either not yet available or rented then to someone else, an apartment opened up. Here is a compilation of various common needs and details as to how others could help.

-Listen to the family members, show concern for their situation, and let them know they are not alone in this trauma. As they gain trust, their stories start to emerge. It could be domestic abuse, causing blindness in one eye in one case, teeth knocked out in another, other abuse often, no family members they can trust or should be around, and years of chaos. Sometimes there are felonies that, in our society, block about everything that could lead to a new life. Often though, it is just circumstances, plus decisions that did not help an already bad situation.

-Since most families have little or nothing, the household items, furniture, and clothing at the church are a blessing. Most families do not have vehicles, so we could use your vehicle and you, at times, to load and deliver. A BIG thanks to those of you who have donated all sorts of items-furniture, air conditioners, towels, bedding, pans, silverware, strollers, and more. A full size bed/mattress is needed right now as is a sweeper, dust buster, broom and stroller. A newer type TV is needed for the apartment we rent from Habitat for homeless women.

-A trip to a thrift shop in town is usually necessary to purchase additional needed items.

-Taking them to a food pantry is a necessity usually.

- Getting an ID, now necessary for everything, is a task that could use your help. It may mean getting the form online for them and then sending a money order to another state. This process could also mean taking them to the social security office in Marion or Kokomo.

-Help them get a free phone from Safe Link or Assurance Wireless. These numbers, and other needed county resource numbers, are in the (free) Wabash County Community Resource Guide that was developed by Homes for All and the Community Foundation of Wabash County.

-Taking someone to the library to apply online, or taking them to a job interview, is needed. Seeing the excitement on his or her face when they come back to the car with a job makes it all worthwhile.

-But, now there is a new problem to be solved - transportation. This may mean going to the Wabash Transit, especially if the job is out-of-town, and setting up times and payment. Or, it may mean working out gas payment in case someone working the same shift could provide them with a ride. Or, it may mean getting a bike and bike lock for them. (Thanks to those of you who have donated bikes!)

-Work on the best care situation for the child/children-and love them.

-Think, long-term, how our church could best "be there" for these children and families on faith journeys, as well as life journeys.

-Find an entity or person who could be a payee for a person who has mental or emotional disabilities and needs a trustworthy person to help them handle their money. (A handful of folks have a small monthly income, but others take advantage of their inability to comprehend some things, and then they are left homeless. And, mental health facilities in this country were closed years ago so that now the jail is the repository for these folks.)

-Tell us of a grouping who has, or might form, a charitable corporation that would renovate a building to be refurbished into affordable rental units.

-Make food for the monthly Growing Grounds gathering that our church provides as a setting for folks to socialize and learn.

-Be prepared to often see tears of joy and great appreciation! Restorative measures in the life of these folks are very unusual, as all they usually face are punitive measures.

If you like crossword or jigsaw puzzles, you will love these real life puzzles in which to get involved.
