Give Kids hope by expressing themselves
through writing!

Did you know writing is the best form of expressing yourself? Every patient you come in contact with has a story unfolding! Are they fighting a dragon, being invaded by Martians, or have a spell cast on them? Let your patients express themselves through a writing workshop. Former teacher and mom of a two-time cancer survivor, author Brianne Banning, will connect with your patients as she guides them through the writing process. She will take them step by step through writing, illustrating, and even publishing their very own book!

Extend the invitation to siblings! They have a different side of the story to tell. What about having a session for kids who have parents fighting cancer? No matter who you are, you have a story to share with others. A child sharing their story today can help a child being diagnosed tomorrow!

"Writing the book..." Monkey in my Chair" gave Claire the opportunity to describe her experiences in her own words...we plan to give copies to her school...we also are going to sell copies of the book as a fundraiser for the Kansas Chapter of LLS."
