

Purpose: To make improvements in disclosures to the public about candidates for elected federal office.

In the House of Representatives

The Federal Qualifications Act of 2024

Section 1

Any person applying for an elected federal office in the United States, in addition to all current requirements, must provide the federal government unfettered access to the following:

1. All academic records from all schools without any redactions.
2. All employment records without redactions unless declared highly classified by the Supreme Court.
3. All health records for the last five years without redactions.
4. All military records without redactions.
5. An original copy of applicant's birth certificate or federal, legally acceptable substitute.
6. The results of a complete medical examination conducted at Walter Reed Hospital by its staff within three months prior to this application.
7. The original video tape of the administering by the current Surgeon General of the United States of a standard mental cognitive test approved by the National Institute of aging. Only one test may be administered to each applicant.

Section 2

Applicant must supply a written, certified document stating that applicant will not run for any federal office after completing eighteen years of elected federal service. An allowed exception: candidate may run anytime for president or vice-president and/or may be appointed to any federal position. Applicant further agrees to waive any "right to privacy" rights pertaining to the information requested above.

Section 3

The federal government shall make these records publicly available to anyone without cost through the Freedom of Information Act as well as being published on a federal government-maintained website visible to the general public.

Section 4

Any person unwilling to provide any of the information requested in Section 1 may not run for any elected federal office.
