The Conestoga wagon was a large, four-wheeled, horse-drawn vehicle, widely used in the United States during the first half of the 19th century. It was used for the transportation of heavy loads of freight over long distances, and originated near Lancaster, Pa., in a section occupied by the Conestoga Indians. Among its distinctive features were broad wheels, a white fabric hood and a convex wagon box. The average vehicle, usually drawn by six horses, had a capacity of five tons of freight. Prior to the extension of railroads into the frontier regions, most of the inland commerce of the United States was transported in the Conestoga wagon. It was the prototype of the famed American prairie schooner used by tens of thousands of westward-bound settlers during the 19th century.

The prairie schooner, or covered wagon, was used in the 19th century by American pioneers for transportation across the western prairies and plains to frontier settlements. Its characteristic white canvas covering resembled the topmost white canvas sails of the seagoing schooners of the period. The prairie schooner was lighter than the Conestoga wagon, and was drawn by only two or four horses. Like the Conestoga wagon, the prairie schooner was of simple construction, consisting of a common farm wagon with a horseshoe-shaped canvas top extending down both sides of the wagon. Oval-shaped openings in the front and rear allowed sun and air to enter the interior.

The first known historian, the so-called "Father of History," was the Greek Herodotus, who lived in the 5th century B.C. Herodotus, however, was primarily a narrator, recording some events with great accuracy, but tossing in so many fabrications with his narratives that he is also known as the "Father of Lies." So, genealogists, beware!

The term "Hobson's Choice" is an expression used to denote a choice without an alternative. The term has reference to the practice of an English liveryman, Thomas Hobson, who insisted that persons who hired a horse from him had to take the one standing nearest the stable door. His action was commemorated by English poet, Thomas Ward, in "England's Reformation," which contained these words:

Where to elect there is but one,
'Tis Hobson's choice; take that or none.

Pennsylvania Dutch was a High German dialect, first imported into America by the German immigrants to Pennsylvania after 1683. These Germans came from the Lower Rhine provinces, Bavaria and Saxony. Owing to their rural life and the segregation of their religious communities, they were able to keep their High German unmixed with English for a long time.

The University of Illinois was founded in 1867 as Illinois Industrial University. It was not until 1885 that it was given its present name. It is a moot question as to when its athletic teams became known as the "Fighting Illini."
