MILLERTON, NEW YORK

Upstate New York's Millerton (two hours north of New York City), on the border of Connecticut, is a small town that has cultivated its own unique flair with its independent businesses and local commerce. When it comes to quality antiquing in a warm and welcoming environment, all roads lead to the Millerton Antiques Center on Main Street, open seven days a week. With 35 dealers, the Center houses many specialty stalls, including fine European art, pottery, and Oriental rugs. The antiquing continues on Main Street, as hot spots such as the perfectly appointed Hunter Bee and the well-stocked B.W.'s Eagle Eye are Millerton mainstays.

Insider Tip: The Irving Farm Coffee House on Main Street (with locations throughout Manhattan as well) features an impressive house blend of fair trade coffee alongside freshly baked pastries.

Hello everyone,

Another month of this unrelenting cold and snowy weather. It's going to be nice to see the warmer temperatures soon. I'm looking forward to getting started on some of the projects on the ever-growing list of things that need to get done. After spring cleanup we will be taking a hard look at Traver Place. We will also be looking at mapping the water lines in the village so we can have an actual working map to reference. I hope you all have a good and safe Saint Patrick's Day and please show your support on March 18th by coming out to vote. The polls will be open from 12 noon to 9pm.

Thank you,

Marty Markonic, Mayor

Edward Trowbridge Collins Sr., born in Millerton, began his career as a player when he was 19 years old in 1906 and continued over four decades until 1930. He had one of the most outstanding careers of any baseball player, setting numerous records, some of which he still holds. While his playing days were spent with the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago White Sox, he was General Manager of the Boston Red Sox in his later years. He was a World Series Champion and one of the first inductees into the Baseball Hall of Fame.
