Welcome Remarks

International Association for the Study of the Commons 15th Biennial Global Conference

Brenda Parlee, Chair and Prateep Nayak, Co-Chair

We aim to build on the past successes of IASC meetings by providing valuable networking opportunities for our very global and diverse membership of academics, communities, practitioners, NGOs, governments resource people and industry leaders. As in the past, we will continue to learn from one another about "commons" issues that matter across local, regional and global scales and share that knowledge with new audiences seeking critical discussion on many issues of social, economic and environmental change. By hosting the conference in Alberta, Canada the intent is to provide an opportunity for participants to demonstrate: academic excellence, commitment to sustainability and respect for the vision of founding IASC members such as the late Dr. Elinor Ostrom. Venues and services offered by the city of Edmonton and the University of Alberta will enable us to support participants in affordable accommodation, and hold the event in a single facility in the beautiful river valley. Exciting and provocative keynote speakers, field-trips to locations such as the Alberta oil sands, and social events during the May 25-29 week guarantee the 2015 conference will be one you won't want to miss!

International Association for the Study of the Commons Executive Council

Tine De Moor, President

On behalf of the executive council of the International Association for the Study of the Commons, I welcome you all to the 15th biennial conference of our organization! Over the past years the commons have received increasing attention among scholars, practitioners and activists, in search of alternative governance models for natural and many other types of resources in times of big societal challenges. Whereas for a long time commons seemed to have disappeared out of the collective memory, the concept is picked up again across continents, from rural to urban settings, and finds application in many different sectors, from resource management to infrastructure to energy to care. We are convinced that your contribution to this conference may generate new thoughts may in turn lead to new research, new practices, new policies. As the IASC we intend to connect you with others working on similar topics in the field of commons, and to give voice to your projects on commons, both among researchers, practitioners and policy makers. We would like to invite all delegates, including those who are not an IASC-members so far, to join the IASC-membership meeting on Tuesday evening (7 p.m., Hall A; followed by drinks), to learn more about our recent activities and future plans, and to contribute your ideas to the association's future. Please do also join the IASC Regional meetings during lunch on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. These are intended for people from or working within specific regions to discuss possibilities of further collaboration. The IASC is made by its members and for its members, your contribution is vital for the resilience of the organization!

Faculty of Agricultural, Life & Environmental Sciences

Stan Blade, Dean and Professor

It is my distinct pleasure to welcome you to Edmonton on behalf of the Faculty of Agricultural, Life & Environmental Sciences, which is celebrating its centennial this year! The 15th Biennial Global Conference for the International Association of the Study of the Commons is an opportunity for attendees to meet people from over 50 countries and forge lasting friendships and partnerships across the globe. Our Faculty has been working towards “providing solutions to global challenges” over the past 100 years in many areas that are of focus during the five-day conference including, poverty, food security, social-ecological resilience, effective governance, human rights, indigenous knowledge, sustainable natural resource development and climate change. The cultural celebrations at both the opening ceremonies and global celebrations banquet will be a unique experience for all, focusing on the diverse culture and community that Edmonton is known for. We are glad you could join us for this special centennial celebration, in partnership with the Faculty of Native Studies. Enjoy the conference!

Faculty of Native Studies

Brendan Hokowhitu, Dean and Professor

The Faculty of Native Studies is pleased to welcome all the delegates, attendees, presenters and guests to Edmonton, Alberta, Canada for the International Association for the Study of the Commons 15th Biennial Global Conference taking place from May 25-29, 2015. I would firstly like to acknowledge that this event is being held on Treaty territory and that the Province of Alberta has treaty relations with Indigenous Peoples from Treaty 6, 7 and 8. I would like to also acknowledge the Traditional Territory on which we are gathered, as a meeting place for peoples from around the world. I would like to specifically acknowledge and thank the diverse Indigenous peoples whose footsteps have marked this territory for centuries such as the Cree, Saulteaux, Blackfoot, Métis, and Nakoda Sioux. It is important, more generally, to recognize the will of First Nations, Métis and Inuit peoples of Canada to continue to share their cultures and traditions with global and multicultural audiences despite the violence of colonisation. All of the Faculty of Native Studies, the University of Alberta and the Host Committee welcome you to what will be a diverse, meaningful and rich conversation.

Treaty 8 First Nations of Alberta

Grand Chief Steve Courtoreille

Tansi! - Greetings to you all, Treaty 8 First Nations of Alberta is pleased and honoured to be co-hosting the 15th Biennial Conference of the International Association for the Study of the Commons (IASC) Conference with University of Alberta. The week will be about sharing knowledge, information and experiences about the social, cultural and economic challenges that result from our changing environment – lands, waters and air. This year’s conference theme is: The Commons Amidst Complexity and Change. It will be a forum to engage in dialogue and relationship building about the range of local and global challenges we have in common such as food security, water governance, climate change and sustainable resource development. We are also looking forward to sharing some of the specific challenges we face as Indigenous people within our traditional territories and lands that are encompassed by Treaty No. 8. The Treaty 8 First Nations of Alberta are extremely proud to be a part of this international conference and welcome the opportunity it provides to build relationships. --- Ekosi.

Small groups of participants will reflect on questions: What lessons on science-practice-policy interaction can be drawn from participants' experience? What research needs can be identified? What ideas can be applied in other contexts to foster science-practice-policy interventions?
			OPEN DIALOGUE SPACE: Addressing Transversal, Unexpected, and Sometimes Unseen Topics in the Governance of Common Resources - Thomas Dyck and Luisa Ramirez

The purpose of this session is to create an open conversation to explore the challenges imposed by transversal or crosscutting topics such as colonialism, paternalism, and conflict in the study of common resource governance. The session involves participating in small group conversations facilitated to enable everyone to share their experiences and knowledge about the topic. Insights from the session will be shared back through social media. Come join the conversation!

Salon 10	F.29	Social Metabolism, institutional change and the commons - Singh, Simron
		The study of commons is inextricably linked to the study of institutions. Commons resources are held collectively under well-defined institutional arrangements - categorized as conventions, norms, and legal rules. They offer meaning to social relations, and protect and reproduce interests. The session and the ensuing panel discussion aim to explore how the concept of social metabolism could provide empirical basis on the biophysical dimension of society-nature interactions that might be relevant to the study of commons and institutional change.

BRIEF FAQs

See iasc2015.org for a full listing of FAQ

What do I need to bring?

For those participating in a one-day fieldtrips and to the pre-conference field trip to Fort McMurray, you may find a small backpack, water bottle, travel mug and good sturdy footwear useful. Specifically, for those travelling to Jasper and the Columbia Icefields; all of those items should be considered mandatory, as well as hat, mitts and some extra layers of clothing. Weather in the mountains can be unpredictable, don't be surprised if it snows!

No water bottles or travel mugs will be provided in your conference packages so you may want to bring your own. Water stations with glasses will be available both at Lister and Shaw Conference Centre throughout the conference.
