

Judge Leticia Astacio having yet another bad day. Seems there is a legislative loophole regarding the fact that a judge can order someone to wear a monitoring bracelet, but has no authority to order them to pay for it. Perhaps she is setting them up for a lawsuit? That would be interesting to follow.

Judge Leticia Astacio, the city court judge convicted of drunk driving in 2016, has been sent back to jail for a third time.

Astacio was removed from the courtroom Thursday afternoon after a hearing. The hearing was scheduled after Astacio's attorney asked to be removed from the case.

In court, Astacio also faced new probation violations regarding her alcohol monitoring device (SCRAM device). The court can order a defendant to wear one, but the court can't force a defendant to pay for it and Judge Astacio said she wouldn't pay for hers.

"I told the probation officer that I would be more than happy to have a SCRAM bracelet, but that I would no longer pay for it as there is no authority for the court to order me to pay for it," the judge said.
