

CONTOUR FARMING

Crop row ridges built by tilling and planting on the contour create hundreds of small dams. These ridges or dams slow water flow and increase infiltration which reduces erosion.

Contouring can reduce soil erosion by as much as 50% from up and down hill farming. By reducing runoff, and increasing water infiltration, contouring promotes better water quality.

