PESC has begun development of a JSON version of the Academic College & High School Transcript and has formed a JSON Transcript Standards Development Workgroup. The JSON version will join the EDI, PDF and XML versions of the Transcript, used by many universities, colleges, states, provinces, vendors, service providers and additional authoritative bodies across Canada and the United States. The charter for the JSON Transcript Workgroup is to provide the most usable, most implementable, most interoperable version of the High School and College Transcript in JSON technology. The Workgroup looks to garner the best ideas during development from across all education, lifelong learning, employment and training while ensuring alignment with other initiatives and other standards – all in support of learner-centric, lifelong learning.

Microcredentials and Verifiable Credentials represent the next wave of recognizing learning in new and innovative ways. Delivering these as Verifiable Credentials using verifiable data, user-centric cryptography, and decentralized identities is creating the next generation of learner agency and control. Yet also introduced are new complexities for data control, privacy, interoperability, data stewardship and exchange. Join this expert panel who will define and explore Microcredentials, and discuss what this new reality means for standards conversations, interoperability and learners.
