

HOW DO I STAND THE PAIN?

By John Lipinski

She told me, in a letter, there's another
Couldn't bear to see the sorrow on my face
To tell the truth, you know I didn't see it coming
Never dreamed that someone else could take my place
I walked into my house and started crying
How I begged her, as my knees hit the floor
My heart was crushed, to listen to her reasons
Then I fell apart, when she walked right out that door

How do I stand the pain, over and over again
I can't understand, what is there to gain
She was my one and only, best woman of my life
Don't wanna face tomorrow, yesterday, I lost my wife

She told me, life with him has no future
But old feelings, they surface, now and then
What do I say, to my little girl, when she asks me
Why he's holding her, daddy please, make this end

How do I stand the pain, over and over again
I can't understand, what she had to gain
I lost my one and only, the woman of my life
Don't wanna face tomorrow, yesterday, I lost my wife
My today is filled with sorrow, I no longer have my wife