Privacy Policy

The Coalition for Patients' Rights (CPR) recognizes the importance of personal information provided to us via our website, www.patientsrightscoalition.org. We maintain the following privacy policy:

- CPR collects certain information to process and respond to requests submitted through our website. This includes information you provide including name, email address, phone number and other voluntary information.
- CPR uses information collected via our website to respond to requests for information or comments; to provide updates about events, news or site information; and to track usage of our website.
- CPR does not share, sell or trade personal information that is collected from our website.
- CPR may use your email address or other contact information to directly send you CPR-approved informational or marketing messages regarding CPR activities.
- CPR utilizes an opt-out policy that enables recipients of CPR communications to unsubscribe from future communications.
