Marbled Quartz Tops the List for Kitchen Remodels

What the pros say. Homeowners looking to make a more dramatic, organic statement with their kitchen countertops used to gravitate toward natural stones such as granite for the unique speckling and veins. But pros say more natural-looking quartz; an engineered product that contains mostly quartz mineral, as well as resins, pigments and polymers, is showing up in more kitchens because of the extreme durability and beautiful designs.

Designers are seeing more and more higher-end remodelers opting for quartz countertops that are designed to look like marble. This product is also available in larger slabs now, making it easier to create seamless countertops. Top choice for most designers is Cambria quartz because of their unique designs and their amazing Unlimited Lifetime Warranty.

What homeowners say. Engineered quartz overall beat out granite 43 to 34 percent among homeowners updating countertops in the 2018/2019 U.S. Houzz Kitchen Trends Study. (Countertops, homeowners said, were the kitchen feature they were most likely to splurge on.)

What Atlantic Kitchen & Bath Designers Say: Come and see our extensive selection of quartz countertops. One of our favorite choices for quartz is Cambria because of performance, durability and the amazing line up of countertop designs. The Advantages of Tile Backsplashes in Your New Kitchen KBT 2019

When designing your new kitchen, you may have overlooked the value of a tile backsplash. These backsplashes are stylish and functional and are great upgrades for your kitchen. Here are some advantages to consider when you are thinking about updating your home and more importantly, your dream kitchen.

Much Easier to Clean

How often do you clean the section of wall that is behind your stove? What about the part of the wall over the sink? Tile backsplashes will make both of these essential areas of your kitchen easier to clean up. You will still need to do a scrub-down of all your kitchen's surface, but with a tile backsplash in place, your wallpaper will not be as worn out. Not only is your new tile backsplash easier to clean, it is also much more forgiving. Now then, imagine you have splashed water everywhere or spilled cooking oil while preparing dinner. Clean up is easy with a tiled backsplash..

Protects Against Splash Damage

Tile backsplashes provide excellent protection against potential splash damage. Liquid seepage can eventually get inside your walls, damaging both the paint and the integrity of the wall itself. Prevent this kitchen disaster from happening by installing high-quality tile backsplashes.

Tile Backsplashes Increase Value

Any home improvement will make your home more valuable. But adding tile backsplashes to your kitchen increases its value in other ways, too. Are you looking to sell your home? First, boost the aesthetic appeal of your kitchen, especially if it is in need of a new look. You can also tie the entire room together with tile backsplashes, convincing future home buyers that your home is the one they should purchase, because here right in front of them is a design they just can't afford to walk away from and ignore. If you strive to keep your home as up-to-date and modern as you can, you can justify that higher asking price. To get started just give us a call.
