

“Horses Change History...and Change Lives” with Ann Jamieson, author of the series “For the Love of the Horse”, Tuesday, November 13, at 6:30 pm, at the Morris Public Library

Join Ann Jamieson, author of the popular series “For the Love of the Horse” (volumes I - IV), for a presentation and book signing on Tuesday, November 13, at 6:30 pm, at the Morris Public Library.

According to Ann, no animal has shaped the history of man more than the horse. From providing us with transportation to delivering milk, coal, groceries and the doctor, to pulling our fire engines, building our roads and plowing our fields, horses have allowed us to expand beyond human limits. Horses have changed history in countless ways.

Ms. Jamieson is a United States Equestrian Federation judge licensed in hunters, jumpers, and hunt seat equitation, and she has shown her own horse, Fred Astaire, in hunters and First Level dressage. Ann has also written numerous articles for magazines and newspapers including a column for The Litchfield County Times. She currently writes for Today's Equestrian magazine, a regional publication focused on the New York/New Jersey/Connecticut area.

Ann Jamieson lives in Kent, Connecticut.
