

Cindi Hughes

Education Director

As co-founder and Education Director of HCFC, Cindi Hughes believes the seasonal ebb and flow of nature can play an instrumental role in childhood development and enhance the education process. This philosophy stems from her fond childhood memories of running barefoot in her parent's garden and her hands-on involvement in her children's education.

Cindi resides at Heritage Creek Farm Camp and organizes the projects of the facility, oversees the farm-based education programs, and with input from her staff writes the summer and seasonal camp curriculum.

She is an animal lover and enjoys taking care of the animals on the farm and loves to share fun, fascinating animal facts with farm visitors. She also values cultural diversity and works with international students from around the world. Over the years, many of her international students have helped teach lessons of global awareness at summer camp programs.

Cindi is an advocate of fostering a life-long love of learning, encouraging people to work hand-in-hand on the land, promoting unity within community, and cultivating a new generation of compassionate and socially responsible leaders.

With her background in Administration and Accounting, she also manages the business side of farm camp and assists her husband, Ed, with his part-time business, Heritage Creek Woodworks, located on the farm.
