

Dr. Doree Lynn

Doree Lynn's DNA was honed in NYC where she was born, raised and educated. However, she's lived an abundantly adventurous and varied life that has taken her to most of the US and about 50 countries, to visit to live, to learn, study and to lecture and/or consult.

Lynn has lived with nature as well. In the early 70's she and her late first husband lived on 13 acres 20 minutes outside of Washington, DC, where they raised chickens and sold eggs at the local country bank. After farming, most days, she went to work as a psychologist attired in her matching bag and high heels – she compares her life to Eva Gabor's in the TV series, Green Acres. She also learned to fly a plane.

In between Lynn co-founded and co-led an Integrative Healing Psychology Training Institute. She has sat on nonprofit, boards, taught, supervised others, lectured, consulted to businesses large and small, received awards and served in many other capacities of a full professional life. She sought out spiritual and wise teachers from other cultures to help her restless soul's longing settle and to educate her about alternative ways of healing. Stays in monasteries brought additional perspective. She became yoga committed and a vegetarian (known to cheat). During that period, and forever after, she traveled, often alone, visiting many countries and living in several. She and her late husband adopted children from another culture. She became a mom, single working parent, then grand mom and possibly soon great grandparent? She wrote hundreds of articles and three published books. In her 50s and 60s, she hosted her own radio shows, became a TV personality and eventually a known expert on relationships & intimacy and sexuality. As she S-AGED, she had a vision of how she wanted to live this last chapter of her life
