General Information (Federal Pension Benefits Standards Act)

If you have a spouse as defined below, he or she is first in line for any survivor benefits that may be payable from the Plan after your death. If a survivor benefit is payable to your spouse after your death, no death benefit is payable to your beneficiary.

A spouse is someone who, at the time of determination, is married to you or is party to a void or, in Quebec, null marriage. A spouse may also be someone who, at the time of determination, is living with you in a conjugal relationship for at least one year. If you have a married spouse from whom you are separated and you are living with another person, for purposes of this Plan, your spouse is the person with whom you are living in a conjugal relationship for at least one year.

If you die before retirement but after you become a Plan participant, the Plan provides a pre-retirement survivor pension to your spouse. If you do not have a spouse, a pre-retirement death benefit is payable to your beneficiary.

The Plan also provides a post-retirement survivor benefit. At the time you apply for your retirement pension, your spouse may waive his or her entitlement to the post-retirement survivor benefit by signing a spousal waiver form and filing it with the Fund Office. If the spousal waiver is filed, you will then be able to choose another form of pension payment that will not provide your spouse with a survivor benefit when you die after retirement. Your designated beneficiary would be the person who would receive the death benefit, if any death benefit is payable after your death.

If you do not have a spouse and you do not name a beneficiary, any death benefit that may be payable after your death would be paid to your estate.

Naming beneficiary or beneficiaries.

Your beneficiary can be a person or persons, an organization or your estate. Also, you can change your beneficiary at any time by completing another Marital Status / Beneficiary Change Form and submitting it to the Fund Office. Your designation is not valid until this form is received by the Fund Office.

If you have a spouse and you also designate a beneficiary, should your spouse die before you, your designated beneficiary is the person who would receive the death benefit, if any death benefit is payable after your death.

You may name more than one beneficiary. In this event, any death benefit that is payable will be divided in equal shares among them unless you indicate otherwise. If one of the beneficiaries dies before you, his/her share would be divided among the remaining beneficiaries.

What if I want to name a minor as a beneficiary?

Someone under the age of 18 (known legally as a minor) cannot directly receive survivor benefits. If you want to ensure your child will benefit from any death benefit upon your death, you should get independent legal advice on how this can be done.

Please note that the information provided above does not cover all details of the Plan. The official Plan document governs in the event of a conflict, discrepancy or omission.
