A Burning Yearning

Farm girl turned hot sauce guru, Dianna Charest has been part of the community at the market since the beginning of 2000. Dianna moved to Florida with her family from Indiana in 1971. After a family vacation to St. Petersburg, the family decided to sell their large family farm and relocate to central Florida's warmer climate. Having not even tasted hot sauce or hot peppers growing up in the midwest, she soon developed a passion for heat.

Dianna married and spent many years in corporate America until she decided to turn her passion into a business. Starting with just a handful of her favorite hot sauces, she opened 'A Burning Yearning' and has been burning America one tongue at a time ever since. The business was her brainchild, but Dianna allows her husband to come in and help out. She personally taste-tests almost all the products she sells and can assess what will agree with your palate with just a few questions. "We are all different" she explains, some people can't handle too much heat, so choosing a hot sauce is a personal thing. "Everybody's palate is different and there is no shame if something is too hot for you". Dianna keeps heat remedies on-hand just in case.

The products at A Burning Yearning include 500 varieties of hot sauces plus BBQ sauces, wing sauces, jellies, mayonnaise and super-concentrated extracts that tip the Scoville heat unit scale at 9,000,000. "We have mild hot to rudely hot sauces" Dianna quips. After 20 years of burning tongues, she is still passionate about the products that she introduces to her store - including some locally produced hot sauces.

Stop by A Burning Yearning to experience Dianna's pepper-expertise and friendly charm. You'll find A Burning Yearning on P-South at P227 & P229. Catch her informative interview with Buz McKim on the Shop Now-Daytona Flea Market Facebook page.
