 Gospel: Mk 8: 27-35. "Two Questions, Two Rebukes"

On the road to Jerusalem Jesus asks his disciples two questions. The first is a general question. "Who do people say that I am?" The disciples respond with what people were saying about him. The popular notion was that Jesus was someone like John the Baptist, Elijah, or one of the great prophets. Then He asks, "but who do you say that I am?" Only Peter has the courage to answer.

Jesus did not want to become a celebrity simply known only for his miraculous powers. It was too early in the formation of his disciples to have them spread word of his messiahship. They would have gotten the message all wrong. They would have missed what Jesus meant when he invited us to "take up your cross and follow me."

The Gospel is suggesting that becoming a disciple is a process of growing in understanding. Peter's quick answer seems correct, at first, but we learn the real answer is much more complex. Peter and the disciples will have to keep quiet for a while; they have more to learn. It is also obvious from what Jesus says to them at this stage of instruction: he is not going to be a quick fix for people's problems.

We cannot just declare our faith in Jesus. If we don't translate our faith into actions it means nothing and is not enough to save us.

"Who do you say I am?" is not a question that we need only to answer once in our lives. Our responses will vary, depending upon how we experience God's presence in our lives, and upon our own level of maturity and faith. The Gospel challenges us: Who is Jesus for us now and what is the meaning of Jesus for our lives now? It is important for us to take Jesus' question seriously each day of our lives.
