

COVID-19 Showing Best Practices

As a professional REALTOR®, I am focused on the safety, health and wellness of you and your family during the selling process of your home.

During this unprecedented period, here's a list of best practices I will be suggesting to other REALTORS® while showing your property:

- We will ask them, and those they have been in contact with, if they have recently travelled internationally or are experiencing any cold- or flu-like systems, and if so, we will ask that their showing request be rescheduled for a later date.
- REALTORS® will be asked to limit the number of people attending a showing. They will guide their client(s) through your home restricting the physical touching of items.
- REALTORS® will direct their clients room by room and ensure they are appropriately spacing individuals as a means of physical distancing.
- REALTORS® will ask their clients to refrain from using the bathroom, if possible, but I recommend that you provide disposable towels/napkins, as well as soap in all bathrooms.
- Before and after a showing, I recommend you disinfect commonly touched areas such as doorknobs cupboards, countertops and faucet handles.

As your REALTOR®, you have my commitment to uphold the highest of professionalism and guide you with due care in the buying and selling process.
