

This Is For Your Child's Future

Did you know that as soon as you stop lessons your baby will begin the process of forgetting the progress he's made in learning how to swim? When taking a break, many parents think that their baby will pick up where they left off only to discover that not only has their baby lost all their skills, but they have developed a fear of the water. Where once the baby was submerging happily and moving a few feet through the water, now the baby is crying and wants no part of the pool. He doesn't remember swim lessons and how much he loved it, because four months is an eternity to a baby.

In WaterBaby classes, we lay the foundation for swimming with building blocks of skills much like a baby learns to hold his head up, rollover, sit up, crawl, pull up, stand without holding on, cruise around the table, toddle a few steps, walk, run, hop.

We recommend year-round lessons so your baby can maintain all the progress he's made and build new skills as he is developmentally ready. We all learn at our own pace and babies do too. Besides being a great way to spend quality time with your baby, year-round infant swimming develops stronger immune systems.
