The non-debate debate

It was a ho-hum.

I strolled out of Whitby's charming Centennial Building on the morning of Sept. 12, unsated by the Chamber of Commerce's mayoral "debate" or Q and A or whatever one might call it.

Perhaps a tiny part of me hoped for a rip-roaring oratorical blitzkrieg of Trumpian proportions, replete with insults and falsehoods. No, that would have been excessive and indeed unnecessary. However the experience did provide me the equivalent of an uninspiring white meat only chicken dinner with a smattering of green peas and a dollop of mashed potatoes - with no gravy.

The setting was certainly charming as the building is also home to the Whitby Community Theatre. A main floor wing features massive steel doors that open into airless offices. While waiting, I found a Town employee in a small office practically wheezing for the lack of air circulation. I joined him in the room for about a minute before needing to step out for oxygen. And what was the reason for the non-functional doors? Vaults? Jail cells? Solitary for past mayoral candidates to reflect?

The CoC laid out yummy breakfast goodies, not chicken for those who misread my earlier metaphor. Some could be bad for me so I summoned the restraint to not gobble the pastries. The coffee though was tepid and tasteless. If you've ever had arena coffee, you'd relate. So ends the culinary review.

Mayoral candidates Elizabeth Roy, Deidre Newman, and Evan Griffiths sat at a table on the stage, answering the moderator's prepared questions and then a few vetted ones at the end written by attendees. A chap in the front row held a timer and yellow and red cards. His job was to raise the yellow card when the speakers had 30 seconds left in their responses and the red one when time was up. Except when time expired, he would jump to his feet, calling "Time's up," which, in my humble view, made the red card redundant. Or the standing was. Regardless, the three hopefuls were respectful of time constraints which helped the morning blandly clip along, just as planned.

The audience of about 100 was comprised of local business types, supporters and a handful of councillor candidates. I would have thought that every prospective councillor would attend given that this allowed them to hear from the next mayor. Wouldn't the $30 entry fee be tax deductible?

Of course, who else could attend on a weekday morning? The affair was pleasant and professional yet it struck me then, as before and since, that a full fledged evening debate, with free admission, should be held since this audience was hardly representative of the Whitby populace.

Then everyone could experience something more of a thrust and parry that might better highlight our next mayor's skills to run council. Chocolate-infused pastries and gourmet coffee could be optional.

Whitby Canadians 9U A team went undefeated and won the OBA championship. It was the only Whitby team of 18 to take the title.

The team won the EOBA's and advanced to the OBAs in Tecumseh on the September long weekend. The championship banner will now hang at the Strike Zone.

What happened to the Ormiston cows?

By Jennifer Hudgins

At a recent coffee get-together, a few senior Brooklinites reminisced about Roy Ormiston, renowned Holstein breeder, and his farm that once stood on the east side of Baldwin Street where Telstar Way and Chelmsford Drive are now located. The discussion ended with a question: "Whatever happened to Roy's two giant cow paintings"?

Harry Lade, a local artist who once owned Brooklin's only sign gallery, painted the 10' x 7' cow portraits in 1953 on sheets of tin purchased from tinsmith Roy Delong who had a shop at 150 Baldwin Street, N.. Harry worked out of his converted barn studio on his Simcoe Street property. These iconic paintings hung on the exterior of Roybrook Farms' barn year after year, greeting out of town travellers, and welcoming home residents.

When Roy passed away in 2015, the paintings were sold to an unknown buyer at the Ormiston disbursement sale, never to be seen again. Or so it was thought. Until the day in 2019 some locals excitedly discovered their whereabouts through a blog written by one of the owners of Our Lucky Stars Cafe in Warkworth, Ontario.

Blog search

In September 2013, Elizabeth Aikenhead, owner of Our Lucky Stars Cafe and Coffee Roaster at 16 Main Street in Warkworth, Ontario, posted the blog looking for information on the cows and the name of the artist. Last year, the Brooklin Heritage Society was happy to provide them with the name.

Trevor Spot, co-owner, had discovered the paintings outside Pot of Gold Antiques on Old Wooler Road. The antique shop's proprietor, Mary Postar, didn't know much about the paintings except that they had come from a barn somewhere around Oshawa.

The original intent for Lucky Stars was to have a rotating art exhibition on its walls. But when they saw the wonderful cow paintings, they knew this is what they wanted. The cafe has never regretted the decision to buy them as they've become a huge part of the Cafe's culture and are very popular with customers.

Return to Brooklin?

Since this came to light, several Brooklinites who recognized the paintings have driven to Warkworth just to look at them. The owners would like to have brass plaques mounted on the frames and welcome any information about the subjects. The cafe is currently for sale and the Brooklin Heritage Society has asked that if the new owners are willing to part with them, the Society would like to bring them home to Brooklin.

A lingering question about one painting remains: In it, a bull on the right has horns, but so does the cow on the left. Cafe customers are asking if this is correct. You can let them know: info@ourluckystars.ca.

2022 Municipal Election

Each municipal election cycle, the Brooklin Town Crier provides all candidates free space to explain their ideas. We contacted them through: a) the emails they provided on the whitby.ca site, or b) via Whitby's town clerk who also emailed candidates with election information and included our request for them to reach us regarding instructions on inclusion in this issue.

Not all candidates responded or published their email addresses on the town site. What follows, therefore, are the platforms of those who did reply to our request.

John Henry

Serving our community over the past 4 years as Regional Chair, I have seen first-hand what I have always known about our Region. Our municipalities are filled with spirit, heart and hope.

REGIONAL CHAIR (1 to be elected)

all our communities.

Supporting our agricultural community.

Challenges of homeless, mental health and addictions.

Preparing the Region for the post pandemic recovery and the expected doubling of our population by 2051.

We can seize the opportunities before us and reflect on the lessons learned over the past 4 years. With a united council, we will ensure that Durham Region will continue to be the destination of choice for Ontario jobs, investment, growth and a community worth living in.

My experience as a councillor, Oshawa's mayor and Regional Chair, along with my business and volunteer experience has given me the knowledge and understanding needed to represent all of Durham's 8 municipalities.

My goal is to continue to work on building our communities, complete the innovation we have initiated, strengthen our diverse workforce and create new opportunities for all who choose Durham Region as their home.

My campaign for Regional Chair focuses on 4 key areas, expanding on the initiatives I began when you chose me to lead the Region in 2018.

NO BETTER TIME THAN NOW TO SUPPORT OUR LOCAL ECONOMY

Alan Hogan of Turner Moore LLP

In 2000, I relocated my family and business to Brooklin. I am involved with a number of businesses, which include Brooklin Tax and Bookkeeping Services Inc., Hogan Financial Services Inc. and Alan Hogan, CPA, CGA.

My office, originally in my home, was moved nine years ago to its current location at 62 Winchester Road East, across from the Luther Vipond Arena.

Accounting, bookkeeping, personal and corporate taxes and the preparation of financial statements are the core of my business. My practice provides services to both individuals and owner-managed businesses in computers, construction, professionals, farming, retail, not-for-profit and other various industries.

BOOKKEEPING SERVICES

We provide bookkeeping services for numerous clients, including the preparation and filing of HST returns and source deduction calculations. These lead to financial statement preparation, the preparation and submissions of T4s, T3s, T5s, T5018s and other related submissions.

We can assist clients with business plans and forecasts, startups, succession planning, payroll and employee issues, to name a few.

AUDIT ASSISTANCE

We also help clients with audits conducted by the Canada Revenue Agency, Workplace Safety and Insurance Board and any other agency that might be required to perform audits on client documentation. We will meet with the auditors on behalf of our clients, file appeals or notice of objections and then follow through on the process to ensure that our client's issues have been dealt with. If you have received a letter from Canada Revenue Agency, do not ignore it as, in most cases, it can be resolved very easily.

BROAD NETWORK

We would like to provide every service our client needs, however, this is simply not possible. We have a network of Tax and Accounting specialists at our disposal to work on complicated tax issues. We also have a network of other professionals for referrals such as Financial Planners, Lawyers, Real Estate Agents, Banks, Mortgage Brokers, etc.

Volunteer activities are an important part of our personal and business life. I have recently joined the "100 Men of Oshawa" and "100 Men of Whitby," the focus of both groups being to raise money for local charities. I have coached minor soccer, coached and managed minor hockey and was the Director of Public Practice for the Durham CGA chapter for four years. We try to support the Brooklin/Durham Region on a personal and a business level whenever we can.

We offer a free one hour consultation to new clients.

MARKETING YOUR HOME FOR ALL IT IS WORTH!

'ABUNDANCE' OF ENTRY-LEVEL HOMES IN DURHAM

It's no secret the real estate market has taken buyers and sellers on an unpredictable roller coaster ride over the past couple of years. Now, as the market enters balanced territory, prospective buyers will be relieved to find stable prices and considerably less pressure.

If you're looking for a home in Durham Region, the news is even better: you'll find an "abundance" of entry-level products so you can stretch your home-buying dollars.

That's according to the 2022 Re/Max Hot Pocket Communities Report, which compared market activity in the first and second quarter of this year in terms of unit sales and prices, analyzing 60 Toronto Regional Real Estate Board (TRREB) districts and others across the country.

The average selling price in Durham Region in August was $920,269, a slight decrease from the previous month, according to Durham Region Association of REALTORS - Durham Region Real Estate (durhamrealestate.org) (DRAR). The average price here hasn't experienced drastic decreases forecasted for the market.

DRAR reports 806 transactions through the MLS® System in August, representing a 15 per cent increase a month-over-month basis. The number of new listings, meanwhile, reached 1,275 - a 13 per cent decrease compared to the previous month.

Here's the average selling price in August by municipality: Ajax ($979,879), Brock ($748,071) Clarington ($923,544), Oshawa ($796,773), Pickering ($990,008), Scugog ($949,057), Uxbridge ($1,340,132) and Whitby ($973,935).

TRREB reports 5,627 home sales reported through MLS® in August, representing a yearover - year dip of 34.2 per cent - a lesser annual rate of decline compared to the previous four months. August sales also represented a month-over-month increase compared to July. Here's the average selling price in August by region: Halton ($1,207,303), Peel ($1,062,984), Toronto ($1,031,979) and York ($1,265,628).

"The number of days a home is staying on the market continues to level out, indicating that transactions are involving home inspections and other important steps to complete a sale," DRAR President Meredith Kennedy reports. "This is important to note as Durham Region moves towards a balanced market."

In a balanced market, the supply of properties and the number of potential buyers is the same and sellers typically accept reasonable, close-to-list prices offers. Housing prices remain stable and for buyers, there's usually a sufficient number of homes to compare and choose from. There's time for home inspections, financing, showings and other conditions key to a successful transaction, removing the pressure so many experienced during the recent house-buying frenzy.

Earlier this year, the digital magazine and financial media website MoneySense described Durham as "perfect mix of suburban and rural" and "an excellent place for those seeking a home close to green space and the waterfront" in its annual Where to Buy Real Estate in Canada report.

Any change in real estate markets can be confusing and even stressful for buyers and sellers alike, but The King Home Team: Royal Heritage Realty has experience successfully navigating every type of market.

We're proud to call Durham Region home and know our community and neighbouring communities well. Whether you're planning to buy and/or sell, count on us to put our experience to work for you so we can help you make the right real estate decision for you and your family! Please visit our website at www.kinghometeam.com for a longer version of this article.

For an update on the market and how it affects the value of your home when you sell, call us at 905.409.6730

Maurice and Eleanor were informative and supportive throughout the entire process. They made themselves consistently available so that we could do our best in competing with the demands of the crazy competitive market. After seeing close to 15 houses with them, they were able to get us into a house in our dream neighborhood with a price that was right. We can't thank them enough for the countless time and effort they put into helping us buy our FIRST home. We would confidently recommend them to any friends and family.
