2	Administrator does not demonstrate professionalism as it pertains to personal boundaries and knowing teaching strategies for various grade levels. Administrator lacks skills in maintaining a toxic free environment free from employees bullying others in grade level meetings and on campus. Administrator does not separate church from state. This is her first year as an administrator, and she has taken path of least resistance in being fair to all employees.
3	The new principal's leadership style is deeply concerning and warrants a detailed critique. While self-confidence is an essential quality for any leader, this individual's large ego often comes across as arrogance, leading to a dismissive attitude toward staff members. This behavior undermines morale and creates a divisive atmosphere within the school. Staff feel devalued and ignored, as their insights, expertise, and contributions are routinely dismissed rather than being acknowledged and utilized to strengthen the team. The principal's limited experience is evident in their overly controlling management approach. Instead of fostering collaboration and empowering staff to take initiative, they micromanage processes, stifling creativity and efficiency. This lack of trust in the expertise of teachers and staff ruther alienates the team, leading to frustration and disengagement. Effective leadership requires building strong, collaborative relationships, which is notably absent in this case. Moreover, the principal demonstrates insufficient knowledge of curriculum, which raises concerns about their ability to support academic growth and instructional improvement effectively. Teachers often find themselves without the guidance or resources they need to address instructional challenges, and this lack of curricular expertise undermines the school's educational mission. Compounding these issues is the principal's failure to treat staff with respect or empathy. Compassionate leadership is critical in a school environment, where teachers and staff face numerous challenges daily. Despite purported training in Social and Emotional Learning (SEL), there is no evidence that the principal has internalized these principles. Their actions lack the understanding and compassion necessary to cultivate a supportive and inclusive environment for staff and students alike. If the principal received compensation for SEL training, it would be appropriate for them to return the funds, as the training's intended outcomes are not reflecte
4	Very happy at Harris!
5	My concern is how can administration be more supportive with educators when there's misbehaviors on a consistent basis and parents are not supportive with helping their child (Instead blame the school/educators).
6	This years principal is doing a good job so far. Setting expectations, involving parents and teachers.

1	Principle is learning that primary students can exhibit junior high behaviors they learned at home and it is not because teacher does not have professional strategies to deal with behavior. Unsupportive to teachers she does not like.
2	PBIS in ineffective for unruly students.
3	There's an absence in professionalism that needs to be addressed regarding disciplinary actions and how to best support educators. There's also an absence in resourcefulness when approaching for help with discipline and support with parents.

2	This school needs to work on building working communities. Not a lot of cross grade collaboration and/or socializing.
