period they also purchased Long Point, and made plans to develop it into a summer colony utilizing island labor and materials in the construction of the cottages. Only one lot was sold, and a Mr. Rice erected a house built of glaciated stone. The depression caused the club to disband, and Long Point was sold to Tom Jones, an attorney from Cleveland. (Developed into the marina 1958) After the death of his wife this house was sold in 1963. During his summers on the island he had an extensive garden and, at one time, raised bees, selling his produce and honey to summer residents.
