

Julia Warren-Ulanch, MD is originally from Texas and obtained her undergraduate and medical training at Texas A&M University. She completed her post-graduate training in Medicine/Pediatrics at the University of Michigan and Medicine/Pediatrics Endocrinology Fellowship at the University of Pittsburgh. Her research emphasis in fellowship was polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS) in adolescents, but she enjoys all aspects of general endocrinology for patients of all ages.

Dr. Warren-Ulanch has been an endocrinologist in Raleigh since August 2006, and leading Creedmoor Centre Endocrinology since September 2013. She is a Board-Certified specialist in Endocrinology and Pediatric Endocrinology with over a decade of experience in managing challenging disorders. She has also completed Endocrine Certification in Neck Ultrasounds (ECNU).