

Rachel Steele

Rising country music artist Rachel Steele brings a special energy and attitude to everything she touches, including her debut country radio single, "Here to Get My Stuff." The release has quickly struck a chord with radio programmers, landing on the Music Row Country Breakout Chart and receiving play on more than 80 stations nationally; impressive accomplishments for an independent artist.

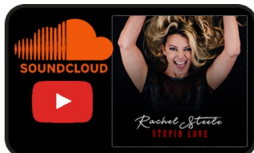

Now based in Sacramento, Rachel Steele grew up in a small town in Northern California, where she was immersed with music at an early age, singing barbershop harmonies with her mother, aunt and grandmother. Country artists like Shania Twain, Martina McBride, the Dixie Chicks and Amy Grant were big early influencers who have played a part in Steele developing her own personal style.

- Debut country radio single: "Here to Get My Stuff"
- New EP release: Stupid Love
- EP was produced by country music great Bobby Randall, a founding member of iconic country band Sawyer Brown.
- Touring credits: Rachel Steele has opened shows for Brad Paisley, Big & Rich, Alabama, Thompson Square, Jon Pardi, Trace Adkins and many others.
- A national radio promotion tour is currently underway, with live on-air radio performances and other events in tour markets.
