

Do You Hear What I (Jesus) Hears?
Wednesday Word
December 23, 2015

To keep it simple due to Christmas Day being only 2 more days away, I decided to just have one of my favorite Christmas songs posted here. I have also provided a link for the history and details of this song.

The holiday season has always been my favorite season and it still is. It has nothing to do with presents or anything like that. I like the inherent joy this entire season brings. Though we hear of people in desperate situations doing drastic things in this season we see something else also. If we are willing to look we can see people talking to those they wouldn't normally talk to any other time of year. We see time taken to enjoy friends and family that isn't taken most other seasons. Most importantly, we see and hear more in this season than other seasons about the miracles Almighty God performs. God performs miracles every day. During the holiday season we tend to open up more which is why we see and hear about more of them. Listen to the lyrics of this song and allow Holy Spirit to speak directly to your heart with what He wants you to know. I say let us believe, see, hear, know, and understand more of who our Lord is day by day by day. We all have to start somewhere. Let this be the season you see the miracles God has done in your life and let the following days be so filled with His presence that you don't have to wait until the holiday season to feel His intense peace and joy that surrounds us each day. God bless you all and peace on earth, good will towards mankind!!!!
