NRA MUSEUM

GUNS THROUGH THE GENERATIONS

By and Located At: NRA Museum in the Nation's Gun Show

(703)267-1600 : nfmstaff@nrahq.org

Almost any firearm has a story to tell and NRA's National Firearms Museum will be bringing some incredible pieces that reveal family history!

You may think that you hold onto things in your house, but what about a rifle that stayed in the same family for more than 180 years? Pennsylvania farmer Michael Ruble ordered a fullstock percussion rifle from gunsmith Lewis Lepper in 1835. While the Ruble family moved from Mifflin County, through the generations, one of their most prized possessions was this .41 caliber longrifle that still bears an inscribed silver plate with Ruble's name.

Maybe a rifle that was ordered in 1865 and is still shooting may be more your speed. Gunsmith Sam Stull of Coshocton county in Ohio built this halfstock rifle for Jacob Wolfe when he was just 15 years old. It stayed in the Wolfe family until this year after its restoration and donation to the National Firearms Museum.

Come learn about arms history at the museum table. Tell us about your family treasures!
