Selecting your Fleetwood equipment:

Whether you are an oldtimer or new to the sport of archery, choosing the correct equipment is very important.

In selecting a bow, remember archery is a sport of skill — not brawn! Usually, men will choose a bow between 35 and 45 pounds and women between 20 and 30 pounds. If your primary interest is hunting, add 10 pounds to these weights. The important thing to remember is to select a bow you feel you could shoot hours-on-end without undue fatigue, holding each shot long enough to take careful aim and develop correct shooting techniques.

Bow weight is determined by the pounds pressure required to draw the bow to a 28" arrow length. All Fleetwood bows are weighed and stamped "28" because this is the arrow length most suited for the average adult male, and is considered a standard. To compute the bow weight at your arrow draw length, either add or subtract 2 1/2 pounds for each inch more or less than 28".

Proper stringing and unstringing is essential to give your bow the care it needs. As shown in the diagram, place the bow string in position on the lower limb, holding in place with a rubber band. Now, step across the bow with your right leg so that the bow lies behind your right thigh. Spread your feet slightly further apart than shoulder width with the right foot ahead of the left. Raise your left heel off the floor and turn the left toe inward. This will allow the bow to lay flat across your left shoe lace and avoid twisting the lower limb. Now, with the lower limb off the floor and flat across your shoe lace and the bow handle across the back of your thigh, apply pressure with your right hand just under the upper recurve and slip the string in place with your left hand. Check to be sure the string is in the groove. Unstring in the same manner. This is the easiest and correct method.

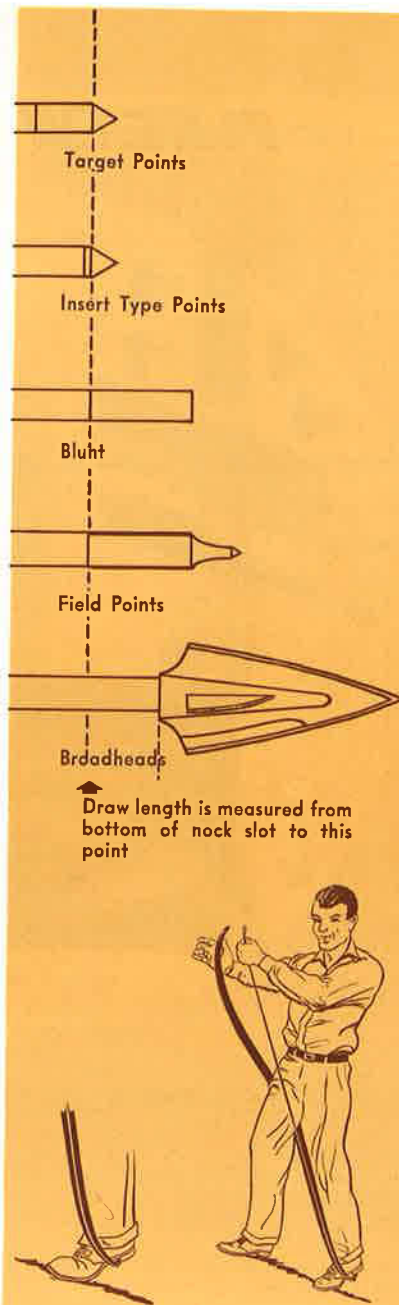

In selecting arrows, there are several types and grades to choose from. There are inexpensive wood arrows for beginners; matched wood arrows for the more advanced archer; fiberglass arrows for extreme durability with accuracy; and aluminum arrows for precision shooting. All of these grades are available in target, field, and hunting arrows.

More experienced archers use arrows that are both spined and weighed, or matched. Spine is defined as the arrow stiffness. Each arrow in a dozen is the same stiffness. For example, a 30 pound bow would require a more flexible arrow than a 45 pound bow. Correctly spined arrows will fly in a straight trajectory without a fishtail or wobbly flight. Also, each arrow in a dozen is within 5 grains in weight to each other arrow. We at Fleetwood, take great care to precision spine and electronically weigh each arrow in a matched dozen and label the box accordingly. Be sure to state your bow weight at your draw length.

If you do not know your draw length, there are two methods. First, and best, is to use a demonstrator arrow. Facing a wall, draw your bow back in the normal fashion and anchor on your face in the most comfortable position, usually along the cheek bone or under your chin. Ask a helper to mark the arrow at the back of the bow. Repeat several times, being sure to anchor in the most comfortable position on your face. The distance from the bottom of the nock to the average pencil mark is your draw length, to the nearest inch. This will be the length arrow you order regardless of type of arrow. The second method is the yardstick method. Place a yardstick against the center of your chest and extend your arms and fingers horizontally in front of you along the yardstick. The reading at your finger tips will indicate the correct draw length for you.

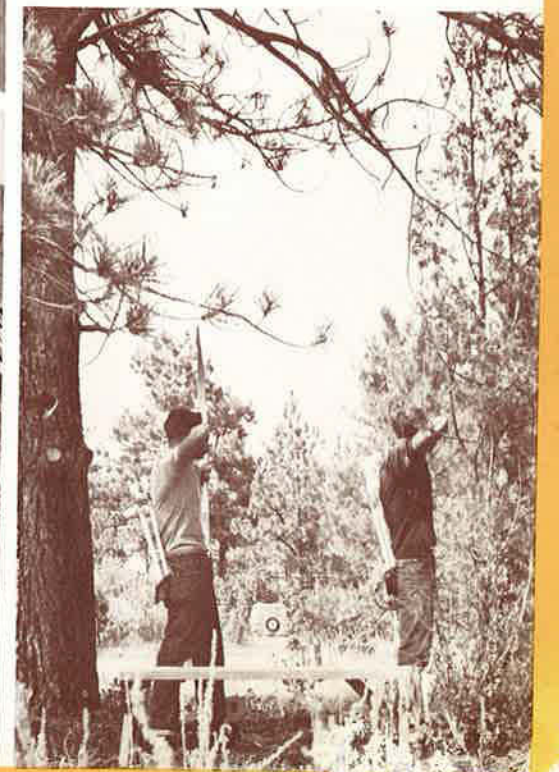

Arrows of different types are not always the same total length. A hunting arrow, for example is longer to allow for the hunting blade and a slight over draw. We at the factory automatically allow for these considerations in different types of arrows when you order by draw length. See diagram.

In the Spring of 1960 we opened an archer's paradise — Fleetwood Acres; designed for the archer and devoted to family recreation. "The Acres" is located in the Black Forest, 30 minutes from downtown Denver in 94 acres of mountainous, beautifully wooded, and scenic terrain. We have two regulation 28-target field courses, 28-target animal course, a 28-target hunter round course, an archery golf course, and eleven 48' mats on the archery range.

The Acres facilities include a fenced playground for children, tent and trailer space with water and electricity, practice butts, Bar-B-Q pits, flag pole, tournament scoreboard, and a commanding view of the famous Pikes Peak.
