April 15th-17th We March Forward Together

Reflections from Rabbi A

Sometimes things seem to happen for a reason ... and sometimes not.

Three years ago, my daughter, Leah, was in Washington, D.C. attending the Annual National Meeting of the National Council of Jewish Women. During her college days, she had worked in that office as an intern – her chosen agency as part of her degree in Public Policy from Ohio State. Now she was attending the conference and has maintained the relationship. While at that meeting in March of 2013, she went to the Gift of Life bone marrow registry to be swabbed.

She was signed up for the conference in March 2016.

But in January, that changed. She got the one in ten thousand calls, a call from the Gift of Life Bone Marrow Registry letting her know that she was a potential match for someone fighting acute myelogenous leukemia.

We knew about this leukemia. One of her cousins, married and a father of two children under thirteen years old, was a victim of this life-ending condition. His sister, happily, was a match and she was able to donate to help save his life.

Leah has always been reasonable and mitzvah-oriented. She was however so unreasonably afraid of needles, that the only time I even touched her in discipline was to restrain her so that she would get the shots she required. Now nearly 25 years old, she never really got over those fears. But to do this procedure involved getting shot after shot after shot – this to bring her normal white cell blood count from, say, around 6,000 to 85,000. Bones aching, she made it through, telling me the day afterwards, "Well, I am really happy that I don't have to take any shots today."

After two months of testing and medical screening, I was happy to accompany Leah while she spent March 16 donating peripheral blood stem cells to a stranger. We know that he was a 40-year-old man with three children. Leah does not know who he is or where in the United States he lives ... and will not know for some time.

She is realistic. Unfortunately the treatment for her cousin came too late, and, as things became desperate, the Rabbis from his shul came to the hospital in Ann Arbor with tallitot so that he could put them on his boys before he died. He succumbed the last time Michigan beat Ohio State in football.

Leah wrote on her Facebook page that she was asking "for good thoughts for my recipient who will get these cells tomorrow and whose life will, God willing, be saved."

Her cousin, Jeffrey Camiener, alav hashalom, was an extremely nice fellow, well thought of wherever he went. And the questions of "Why Him" of course plague his memory.

You see, there are a lot of times in life when we don't know "why." We oftentimes hear it said that "Everything happens for a reason." But who said that? You don't find those words in Jewish texts. Of course, there are some like the mystic Baal Shem Tov, who said that everything happens for a reason ... that even when a leaf falls, it happens for a reason. Those who believe this way oftentimes turn to the story of Purim as proof. In the tale, many coincidences take place

The Blackwell Inn and Conference Center 2110 Tuttle Park Place, Columbus, OH 43210

Double Chai! Come and celebrate Rabbi Howard Apothaker and Marcie Golden's 36 years of service at Temple Beth Shalom on April 16 with a fabulous dinner and entertainment from renowned comedian Rabbi Bob Alper.

Event co-chairs Janice Brillson and Marilyn Friedman, plus the Spring Gala committee, have planned an evening filled with food and fun. It's a great opportunity to catch up with your Beth Shalom friends — and to thank Rabbi A. and Marcie for three-plus decades of leadership.

Rabbi Apothaker became a rabbi at TBS when our congregation was less than three years old and still sharing a building with Eastminster Presbyterian Church. On July 4, 1980, he led the first of what would become more than a thousand Sabbath services.

From weddings, baby namings and b'nei mitzvahs — to all of our holiday celebrations — both Rabbi A. and Marcie have been leaders in our congregation's most joyous events. Join us at The Gala and show them how much they have meant to us over the years!

About Us

Temple Beth Shalom is a warm and inclusive congregation whose members are inspired to explore and express Judaism within the broad and dynamic framework of Reform beliefs and practices. We seek to provide Jewish spiritual, educational and social opportunities which encourage personal development and social responsibility as well as promote greater knowledge of our Jewish history and culture.

... Esther – from out of nowhere – becomes the Queen, Mordechai's in the right place at the right time, the King can't sleep ... and then we find out that it all happened for a reason.

The Jewish Spanish philosopher, Yehuda Halevi, taught in the eleventh century, that there are three different causes for death: one is a natural cause, one is an incidental cause and sometimes there is a Divine cause ... sometimes ... but certainly not always. And in the next century, the rationalist, Maimonides thought that, while divine providence controls the collective destiny of the Jewish people, when it came to the destiny of individuals God's providence was limited to the most righteous and learned - not to the masses!

To modify a two-word popular statement: Stuff happens! And it doesn't always happen for a reason!

That is why it always shocks me when someone suffers a tragedy and friends tell them: "God has his reasons." Or: "God doesn't give us more than we can handle." Who said? I've seen all too many people who God has given a lot more than they can handle. Who knows why? Not everything makes sense.

So God puts us on earth to try to better the odds. In the Shakespearian classic, Julius Caesar, Cassius says to Brutus: "Men at sometimes are masters of their fates." Yes, there are things in life without reason, but other things with. God does not make a personal appearance in the Story of Esther and Mordecai and the salvation of the Jews of Shushan. But God's representatives, you and I, and Leah, can and must.

When they completed the harvest of the stem cells, the 16 oz. or so looked so common, similar to a heavy baggie of turkey gravy. Things got more serious when I read the expiration date on the bag. All this work and by this time the next day, this fluid's life-giving force will expire. But the sense of both urgency and hope would be stimulated by the last scene.

You know the tale of Sisyphus, punished for eternity by being forced to roll an immense boulder up a hill, only to watch it roll back down, repeating this action in perpetuity? Well, these difficult trips from Detroit from Jackson, MS, the multiple shots, the body pain, the anxiety, the "culling" procedure itself, could have all been in vain until, about a half hour after procedure was over. Then I saw the courier speaking with the coordinator of this whole sophisticated and highly-orchestrated procedure. On that couriers travel bag was the blue insulated container with the stem cells. In his pocket was a ticket that would allow him guaranteed travel on any airline from Detroit to any airport at any time to deliver "life" to the "dying." The Sisyphian boulder would make it over the top.

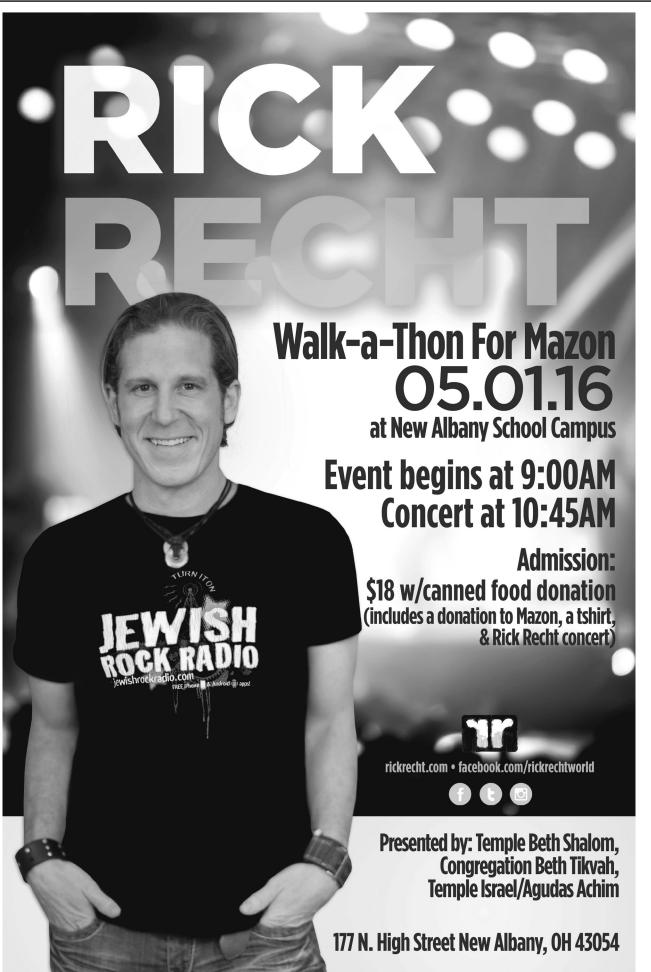

Yes, there are things in God's hands, others in ours. Yes, there are things beyond our control, but much that we can control.

While we battled against "Haman," Mordechai and Esther went to work and took things into their own hands. And when they did, we were able to prevail against forces that might have destroyed us. We sought a sign of God's presence, and we found the divine spark God planted within us.

And as individuals we get tired of combating the physical and emotional challenges we confront. But we dare not give in to despair ... we dare not lower our bar. We can be examples of what was said of the Jews in the days of Purim: "La-yehudim hayata orah v'simhah — and for the Jews there was light and joy... kein tihiyeh lanu — so may it be for us." Amen.

The Buzz from Rabbi B

Rabbi Benjy A. Bar-Lev, Associate Rabbi

In the summer of 2004 Karena Bailey moved to the Colorado Rockies for a change of pace and to enjoy the clean mountain air. Although she enjoyed the beauty of the town, she had a difficult time finding work there. After her intended job fell through, she searched for months to get any type of work, even looking outside of her professional field. After six months of searching, Karena ran out of money. She was alone and stranded. On top of her financial woes, she soon after became very ill with a rare intestinal infection. She had no job, no health insurance, and few friends in her new town. She was sleeping on the floor of a friend's vacant rental property. A few months later around the December holidays, she was able to secure a part time job in a mall shop with good co-workers and a nice boss. She made enough money to put gas him her car, pay a few bills, and eat at least one meal each day.

She had a hard time watching people doing holiday shopping, while there were some days where she didn't eat much at all. Her situation was not looking good. That evening, as Karena sat in her car, she prayed a very specific prayer - please God, provide me with a decent meal, so I can get healthier, beat my illness, and be strong. Having gathered enough strength to drive herself home, she started the car, and headed toward the rental property. As she pulled up the driveway, she looked toward her front door, and saw four large grocery bags on her front stoop. She sat in the car for a moment looking at them - what could that possibly be? She got out of her car, looking for a sign that anyone was there or had been there. Nothing. She walked over to the bags and saw something amazing. Four large bags of groceries. Not just any groceries, but many of the foods that Karena loved and would have bought if she had the money to do so. She was shocked.

Few people, including her family knew where she lived. She had been pretty quiet about her financial woes. She called everyone she could think of, but nobody confessed to leaving all that food for Karena. She later said, "In a way, those grocery bags of food saved my life. I had good food to eat. I became stronger, and got better physically. After the gift of groceries, my faith was strengthened, and my spiritual vigor increased. I became myself again. It was only a few weeks after that that I was offered a good job in my profession, and was back on my feet shortly after that. You might say that the groceries were the most miraculous gift I could have received, because they were an injection of positive energy exactly what I needed to go on. Karina later found out, that her boss, the owner of the little shop in the mall, had purchased the groceries for her. He said to her, "I was hungry once. I remember. I couldn't forget if I tried. When I got back on my feet I promised to always remember my experience, and help people in small ways wherever I can."

Near the end of this month starts the wonderful holiday of Passover. Passover is a time to be with family, a time to celebrate the freedoms we have. I remember our family seders growing up - they were chaotic to say the least. I can still close my eyes and see our family's seder table in my grandparents' living room. I can smell the matzah ball soup. I can picture my Grandfather asking us if we know what "moraine" is (cattle disease). I can hear my grandmother and mom laughing together. Time around the family seder table is irreplaceable - it is so important. But even as we sit around these tables in 2016, joyfully telling the story of our people who went from slavery to freedom, we must remember that there are many within our own community who are not vet free, who do not have a table around which to sit. They are people who don't have enough to eat, who go to bed hungry, who are lacking in strength. As Samuel Chu from Mazon reminded us at the Reform Community Shabbat last month, the latest numbers show that right now there are 48.1 million Americans struggle with hunger every day, including 15.3 million children, and 5.4 million seniors. Thousands of people right here in our city are in need. Here in Ohio, we are the 6th worst in the nation, with more than 16% of our households being food insecure. But we can help.

During our Passover seder, there is a famous line in our haggadah which says, "Ha lachma anya. This is the bread of affliction... Let all who are hungry, come and eat; all who are needy, come and share Pesach with us." It doesn't matter what the person's race or gender or religion - here we are commanded to open our doors to anyone in need. Rabbi Sarah Weissman teaches us that "Giving charity is a built-in component of many Jewish holidays, from Purim to the High Holidays. But the invitation extended in the Haggadah is unique: we don't just give money or food to others in honor of the holiday. During Passover, we don't go out and drop some coins into a beggar's cup or drop off some cans at a food bank. We open our doors and invite the needy into our homes, to sit at our tables with our loved ones, to join us in a more intimate, personal way. Ha lachma anya begins the Maggid section of the Seder, the telling of the story of the Exodus. In a way, this invitation to share lachma anya, the matzah, bread of affliction and liberation, demonstrates that Passover is an antidote to isolation. Meals and stories, the twin essences of the Seder, are meant to be shared. The Haggadah teaches us that our obligation is not only to give to the poor, to fill their physical needs, but is also to fill their emotional and spiritual needs, the needs of support, caring, acknowledgment. The invitation of the Seder is an offer of nourishment of all kinds."

If we think about our lives in terms of the Pesach story, many of us would find that we are much more like the Egyptians than the Israelites. Many of us are comfortable, well nourished, and not in need. But Pesach reminds us that we must use that power we have for good. Pesach reminds us that we too were slaves, we too were Israelites, and it's important for us to act on behalf of those who are in need.

So what can we do? The best thing we can do is open up our homes and our seders to those in need.

Maybe we have a friend or an acquaintance who we know could use a good meal, and an invitation to seder may be just the salve he or she needs. We can also help by supporting our United for Hunger Walk-a-Thon for Mazon on May 1st. The Religious Schools of all three Reform Congregations are coming together to raise money for Mazon, a Jewish organization that helps solve issues of food insecurity in our country. The walk will provide funds for Mazon and food for the Mid-Ohio Food Bank. You can enter as a walker with our Religious School students for $18, you can sponsor a child who is walking for $18 or more, or you can donate to the fund. You can find a link on the Temple website to do that. Join us at the New Albany 2-8 building on May 1st at 9:00 am for a wonderful program - it will be a walk-a-thon followed by a Rick Recht Concert - hopefully we will raise lots of money to help some of the people in need in our communities.

Back in Colorado, Karina took her boss's message to heart, and has been buying groceries for people in need ever since January of 2005. Recently, when reminiscing with her boss, she found out how much he paid for those bags of groceries: $75. "That seventy five dollars saved me." It wasn't just the food that saved her, it was the fact that someone cared, that someone acted on her behalf, that someone put himself in her shoes, and found it very difficult to walk. Let us, this Passover season, remember that during our seders, we are instructed to literally picture ourselves as slaves coming out of Egypt. Let us open our doors and our hearts and our wallets to those in our community in need. And let us, this Passover season, work to make our community a place where no one is enslaved, and everyone is free.

The Temple Beth Shalom board is looking for new Welcoming Committee members, interested in helping new members become acquainted with the congregation.

"In 2015, our congregation grew by more than 30 new families," said Julie Alpert, board membership committee chair. "We would like to pair current members with new members of similar ages and/or interests to invite them to meet for Temple events and programs, or just answer any questions new members might have."

For more information or to get paired with a new member family, contact Julie Alpert at (614) 805-1209 or call the Temple Beth Shalom office at (614) 855-4882.

Lee Mandel Author of 'Unlikely Warrior: A Pacifist Rabbi's Journey from the Pulpit to Iwo Jima', to Speak at Beth Tikvah Columbus

On Monday, May 2, at 7:00 PM at Congregation Beth Tikvah, Lee Mandel will deliver a presentation on his 2015 book Unlikely Warrior: A Pacifist Rabbi's Journey from the Pulpit to Iwo Jima. This presentation is a community wide event sponsored as part of the 2015-2016 JCC of Greater Columbus Bookfair Program. The book is the wellresearched and very well written account of Rabbi Roland Bertram Gittelsohn (1910-1985).

Mandel is a retired physician from the US Navy Medical Corps, at the rank of Captain. He has previously published Moryak: A Novel of the Russian Revolution, for which he was awarded the 2010 Grand Prize for Fiction from the Santa Fe Creative Arts Council. Additionally, as an acknowledge authority on JFK, Lee was featured on "Ten Things You Don't Know About John F. Kennedy," in one of the episodes of the History Channel's 'Ten Things You Don't Know About...'series.

Roland Gittelsohn story begins as a first generation American born of an immigrant family that settled in Cleveland, Ohio. His father, Reuben, was a frustrated physician and his grandfather, Benjamin Gittelsohn, was an Orthodox rabbi. Roland was a brilliant student and a champion high school debater. In 1936, he was ordained as a Rabbi by the Hebrew Union College, in Cincinnati,

Gittelsohn went on to become a beloved congregational pulpit rabbi. However, he became most well-known for his extreme pacifist views, which he frequently expressed. In his mind, warring was totally unacceptable and could not be justified under any circumstance. This. of course, was during a time in history between the two World Wars; the first often being referred to as "the war

Nazi Germany under Hitler began waging war on his neighboring sovereign nations and news of Hitler's acts of antisemitism on Jews within Germany began trickling into the US. Even this did not dissuade Gittelsohn from his ardent pacifist stand including his urging the US to stay out of the European affairs of the time. Then, December 7, 1941 came and with it the unprovoked and massive attack by the Imperial Japanese Navy on Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands. The American overwhelming reaction was shock resulting in a quick Declaration of War.

Pearl Harbor and the Declaration of War against Japan deeply troubled a now conflicted Gittelsohn. He ultimately convinced himself war was justified under these circumstances, a change of personal conscious and conviction not undertaken lightly. True to his new values, he made application to become commissioned in the active duty Navy Chaplain Corps. After attending Chaplain School, Gittelsohn became the very first Jewish Navy Chaplain to be assigned to the Marine Corps. He endured considerable antisemitism during stateside and Hawaiian Islands assignments.

Fast forward to Iwo Jima; assigned to fleet marines. Gittelsohn was in the thick of this most horrible of battlegrounds. He administered to the spiritual and comfort needs of marines -- many frightened, wounded, and far too many dying. As is a Navy Chaplain's training, he saw to the needs of marines regardless of their respective religion. He served most courageously in a very hostile environment of incoming fire -- often placing his own life in danger.

In the immediate aftermath of this long and hard fought battle, one of the important tasks for the survivors was the proper burial of the remains of their far too many marine comrades. The Iwo Jima battleground cemetery was divided in Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant sections. The Senior Chaplain at Iwo Jima selected Navy LT Gittelsohn to make the eulogy speech for all buried in the battleground cemetery. There ensued an uprising by Gittelsohn's colleagues, especially the Catholic Chaplains, to not allow a Jew to eulogize the non-Jewish hero-dead. The Senior Chaplin stayed with his original plan despite these protests and threats to appeal up the chain-ofcommand. Gittelsohn in a near last minute decision declined to make the eulogy speech in order to protect the Senior Chaplain from a controversy that would most assuredly have been a blemish on his military record. Thus, chaplains from Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish denominations gave separate eulogy speeches over the buried in their respective cemetery sections. Gittelsohn, not having time to rewrite the eulogy he prepared for all the buried marines, delivered that prepared eulogy over the Jewish Section. What followed was nothing short of amazing. I will leave it to Lee Mandel to tell the rest of the story.

Please plan to attend Lee Mandel's remarks on this extraordinary rabbi, chaplain, and human being. Contact Cheryl Dritz (614-599-6238), at the JCC, for event details and to reserve a seat. It is an event not to miss!

President's Column

Steve Herman, TBS Board President

Each spring there is a certain nostalgia as we stretch and shake off the winter. Each spring I hear the song "Here Comes the Sun," and it's like the first time I ever heard the song. I think this is why we celebrate Passover in the spring time, so we can celebrate the years that have passed, yet look forward to what the future has to offer. And this spring is full of opportunities to look forward. With The Women of Beth Shalom's 18th Women's Only Seder, the events over the Gala Weekend, and of course the Temple Wide Seder!

Diane and I are very excited to spend the evening with Rabbi Apothaker, Marcie Golden and all of you to celebrate the 36th year of a career steeped in dedication and hard work. Rabbi Apothaker and Marcie Golden have provided this community with such vision, guidance and dynamic synergy and we cannot thank them enough...they are truly inspirational. We are very much looking forward to dining, celebrating and laughing along together as we launch forward into this new chapter of Temple Beth Shalom!

Of course the Gala Weekend isn't just about Saturday night! We invite you to join us on Friday April 15th for a wonderful Shabbat Chai featuring the Shabband! It will be a great way to kick of the Gala weekend and truly come together as a community! And of course, the crown of the Gala Weekend is the Mitzvah Day Celebration! There are many, many outstanding activities to take part in and wonderful opportunities to give back to the community. We will be joined in our efforts this year by our friends from across the parking lot at All Saints Episcopal Church! A huge thank you is owed to Marilyn Friedman, Janice Brillson and the rest of the Gala Committee for their hours of hard work and dedication to ensuring this weekend's success. Thank you all.

I would be remised if I didn't mention the April 22 Temple Beth Shalom "First Seder". A wonderful opportunity to get together with the community, be with friends and family and not have to worry about preparing a Pesach meal! For a nominal fee, which can be found elsewhere in "The Window", we welcome everyone, one and all, to join in our Passover Seder!

Thank you,
