

DESCRIPTION

Uncovering suicidal ideation, planning and intent in a primary care setting (or specialist's setting) is a daunting task for many reasons, not the least of which are the difficult time pressures encountered in such settings. A recent study showed that nearly 50 percent of patients who died by suicide have seen a medical health care provider within a month of their suicide, with 22 percent having seen a medical provider within one week of their suicide.

In this half-day training, Dr. Shea, one of the most popular speakers in mental health today, will provide a compelling two-part presentation (with video demonstrations) on interviewing techniques for uncovering the types of hidden secrets - such as incest, domestic violence, marital stress, financial stress, antisocial behaviors and substance abuse - that set the stage for suicide and are common topics for exploration in a primary care setting. Dr. Shea will then demonstrate the acclaimed interviewing strategy for rapidly uncovering suicidal ideation and planning known as the Chronological Assessment of Suicide Events (CASE Approach) that has shown itself to be extremely useful in primary care settings.

OBJECTIVES

- Be able to understand and describe the difficulties of uncovering suicidal ideation, planning and intent in a primary care setting.
- Be able to utilize the following validity techniques (normalization, shame attenuation, the behavioral incident, gentle assumption, denial of the specific, the catch-all question and symptom amplification) that are useful for uncovering sensitive and taboo topics that trigger suicide.
- Be able to describe and use the above validity techniques as flexibly utilized in the innovative interview strategy for eliciting suicidal ideation, the CASE Approach, as adapted to the hectic time constraints of a primary care setting.
