

QUESTIONS

By John Lipinski & Cody Gardner

I was your knight in shining armor, which now has turned to rust
Was that love we shared together, was it ever more than lust
You left me here all alone, lying in this empty bed
Wishing you'd call to answer, these questions in my head

Questions like, why did you go, are you coming back, where have you been
I was your better half, used to make you laugh, will I taste your kiss again
Do you miss my smile, it's been quite a while, too many things unsaid
Can you recall my scent, or my tender touch, the tears we once shed

Without you, I'm lost, I can't be found
If my heart's still beating, it doesn't make a sound

Wand'ring our town by myself, reflecting on lost affection
With a mind, placed on a shelf, I thought you were perfection
And though we had our ups and our downs, never dreamed we'd ever end
Sharing this life together, hand in hand with my best friend

Questions, they come and go, are you coming back, where have you been
Did you have to leave, I still believe, I could taste your kiss again
Will you miss my smile, and after awhile, want my love once more
Questions arise, would I be surprised, could it be like before

You went away, I'm lost, don't want to be found
This world of mine is empty, without you around

I was your knight in shining armor, armor that's turned to rust
Was that love we shared together, was it ever more than lust
You left me here all alone, lying in this empty bed
Wishing you'd call to answer, these questions in my head
