The unwitnessed distribution of bagged antisemitic flyers up and down the Grand Strand is disturbing. The best we can do is report it to the local police who are limited in what they can do because there are no hate crime laws in South Carolina.

Perhaps we can learn something from our neighbors to the south in Georgia. State Rep. Esther Panitch (D), a freshman, denounced the flyers from the floor of the House with dozens of fellow members surrounding her. Panitch vowed action. She's a co-sponsor of House Bill 30, which would adopt the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance's "working definition of anti-Semitism" as Georgia law. It defines it as rhetorical or physical manifestations of hatred toward Jews. This includes "targeting of the state of Israel," although it also says that "criticism of Israel similar to that leveled against any other country cannot be regarded as antisemitic." Such a definition could trigger enhanced penalties for anti-Jewish criminal acts under Georgia's 2020 hate crimes law. Supporters say that too often, agencies do not react forcefully enough to antisemitic acts.

Panitch said she and her family have previously encountered antisemitic acts, including swastikas drawn on her daughter's freshman dormitory room at the University of Georgia and antisemitic messages projected at last year's Georgia-Florida football game, which two of her children attended.

"I get angry because it doesn't end with that. It continues with injured and murdered Jews," Panitch said.

Here, in South Carolina, we cannot hope for a "House Bill 30" until our state legislators are convinced that we need hate crime laws. We must give support to the local Jewish organizations that are working to raise their awareness.

Wisdom From Afar....

Suzan Cohen

We all know that the Torah is a very compact compilation of history, laws, revelations, and amazing stories. Stories are told in a few short chapters that would take a Russian novelist a thousand pages or more to tell. In the Book of Exodus, the story of Passover, from the birth of Moses to the arrival of the Israelites in Canaan, is told in just under 12 chapters, or less than 20 pages in the English translation that I have on my desk.

But by the time we reach Exodus 13:3-8, the journey from Egypt is complete and life for the Israelites in the new land begins, as we read in this passage:

And Moses said to the people, "Remember this day, on which you went free from Egypt, the house of bondage, how the Lord freed you from it with a mighty hand: no leavened bread shall be eaten....Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day there shall be a festival of the Lord....And you shall explain to your child that day, 'It is because of what the Lord did for me when I went free from Egypt."

Of course, the text doesn't mention how to remember the day. Later in the Torah, we learn that Passover was one of the three pilgrimage festivals, when people would travel to Jerusalem to offer sacrifices of lambs at the Temple and would later feast on their portion of the sacrifice where they would perhaps share stories of the Exodus.

All of that changed in the 1st century CE with the destruction of the Temple by the Greco-Romans. With their connection to their traditions of Temple sacrifice irrevocably severed, new forms of worship had to evolve to keep the Israelites connected to their faith and to their communities. From this turmoil, the first Haggadat were born. The format of the Haggadah (Hebrew for telling) was influenced by the Greco-Roman custom of holding banquets that were accompanied by philosophic discussion.

Let us fervently pray for the comfort and recovery of our dear temple members and friends and for the continued strength of their caregivers.

Georgetown's Historic Jewish Cemetery Needs Help

by Joy Birnbaum

Temple Beth Elohim is calling for donations to restore the wall surrounding the historic Jewish Cemetery in Georgetown, SC. The wall has been damaged by time and weather, and we need to raise $40,000 to repair it.

This cemetery is the final resting place for many of Georgetown's founding fathers, including Jewish mayors and Revolutionary War soldiers who have been an important part of our city's history. The cemetery continues to be an option for current Temple members and with proper care and maintenance, will be available for future generations, as well.

We imagine this wall began as brick with iron fencing above it. The stucco that was applied over time to hold the aging bricks in place, is now losing its effectiveness and crumbling. Additionally, plants and algae have taken root on the bricks, further reducing the stability of the wall (see photos below). To ensure that our historical Jewish Cemetery remains intact, we are appealing for assistance from generous donors.

Finally, it is important to note that the current maintenance work is not covered by perpetual care funds set aside years ago. This money is safeguarded for grounds, plots and trees. The wall is outside the scope of perpetual care funds. Temple Beth Elohim owns and is responsible for the cemetery.

Please consider donating to our cause. Every little bit helps. We are grateful for your support.

Remembering the Day

The Haggadah that grew from this ferment is a remarkable book or, dare I say, books. Over the centuries, many versions in many languages have been published. (I have eight different versions in my house.) Some are more detailed than others (even offering suggestions on how to set the table!). There have been some alterations over the centuries, many of which reflect more recent history of the Jews.

But the basic elements remain the same: the sanctification of the meal, the four cups of wine, the symbolic foods on the Seder plate, greeting Elijah, the afikomen, etc. And the elements that are designed to keep children engaged in the Seder – such as the four questions, dipping their fingers in the wine for the 10 plagues, and the joy of singing D'ayenu and Had Gadya – ensure that the next generation will remember what the Lord did for us all.

SPECIAL CELEBRATIONS IN ISRAEL

Yom HaShoah 18 April 2023, is observed as Israel's day of commemoration for the approximately six million Jews murdered in the Holocaust by Nazi Germany and its collaborators, and for the Jewish resistance in that period. In Israel, it is a national memorial day.

Yom HaZikaron 25 April 2023, is the national remembrance day observed in Israel for all Israeli military personnel who lost their lives in the struggle that led to the establishment of the State of Israel and for those who have been killed subsequently while on active duty in Israel's armed forces. As of 2022, they number 24,068. Recently, the memorials have included all Israeli civilians who were victims of terrorism.

Yom HaAtzmaut 26 April 2023, marks the anniversary of the establishment of the modern state of Israel in 1948. In May of 1948 the soon-to-be Prime Minister, David Ben Gurion, declared the independence of the State of Israel, which was recognized by the United States, the Soviet Union, and other countries, though not by the surrounding Arab states. Israelis take to the streets across the country to attend outdoor concerts, parties and to watch fireworks displays. Friends gather outside or at nature reserves, museums, and other attractions open to the public, free of charge for the day.
