Snakes, pinches, and Irish Bingo

“Hey, if it bothers you that I’m not wearing green, just pin a twenty-dollar bill to my shirt.”
— Crabby Maxine

by N.L. Preston

Best of luck to you, Go n-eiri leat, as the Irish might say. You’ve probably heard St. Patrick drove snakes out of Ireland? Surprise, there have never been snakes in Ireland or signs of snakes in the country’s fossil record. Water has surrounded Ireland since the last glacial period and before that, the region was covered in ice and too cold for reptiles. My husband thinks Ireland would be a great place to live as he hates snakes. Once my father and he went for a walk behind my parents’ farmhouse. Not ten minutes later, I heard both screaming and laughter. They had encountered a small garter snake and that was it for Robert. He ran lickety-split back towards the yard yelling killer snake at jet engine decibels. Dad and I laughed till tears ran down our cheeks. Robert didn’t appreciate our humor. My loveable husband of Irish descent always wears orange on March 17th to honor his Protestant heritage; not green, which signifies Catholic heritage. Surprise, he and many others don’t know that in 1783 blue was designated as Ireland’s official color because St. Patrick was usually depicted wearing blue.

Next surprise, Robert loves corned beef and cabbage, a traditional Irish dish. Me, I can’t stand the smell as it cooks. Though cabbage has long been considered an Irish food, corned beef has only been associated with St. Patrick’s Day since early 20th century. Irish immigrants living in New York learned from their Jewish neighbors about substituting cheaper corned beef for Irish bacon to save money. My taste buds tell me that it was a bad switch but eat what you like, and I’ll do the same.

Next, the St. Patrick’s Day tradition of pinching those not wearing green. Robert and I wear orange, so we are frequent targets for pinch crazy lunatics searching for non-conformists like us. While teaching, I handled this with my students by stamping cheeks or hands of those who were greenless with a washable green shamrock. Problem solved, no tears. This pinching tradition stems from Irish folklore about lobaircin—leprechauns. Supposedly, people wearing green are invisible to them, but they can see and enjoy pinching those not wearing green. To avoid their pinches, carry a 4-leaf clover to warn them away. Human pinchers? Pinch them back.

In Ireland, March 17 is a religious holiday with all pubs closed. Here we drink green beer, wear green, go pinch crazy, and generally behave like inebriated apes. An alternative to such tomfoolery is to ask your local bingo to play a few games of Irish bingo. Everyone gets one bingo paper and the game begins with players standing. Numbers are called and players must sit down if that number is on their card. The game ends when there is only one person left standing and she/he wins whatever.

You may enhance your luck on these games and otherwise by drowning a shamrock in whiskey. Put a live non-paper shamrock into a glass of whiskey, then make a toast to Ireland. Down it in one go, then toss the soggy shamrock over your left shoulder. Good luck will find you. Or the soggy shamrock will hit someone in the face who will not be amused.

New casino series

The director of the wildly popular Squid Game series on Netflix is producing a new Korean series, The Dealer. According to the press release The Dealer, “is a crime drama that follows Geonhwa, a brilliant casino dealer who, after a housing scam shatters her wedding plans, is forced to unleash her long-hidden powers.” Her fiancé is a fierce (at work) but kindly (at home) detective, while another character is “a formidable casino ace whose razor-sharp instincts and unreadable poker face raise the stakes at every turn.” No description of the villain(s), word on when it will debut, or how many seasons Netflix has signed on for were announced at press time.

Powerball teams up with NFL

The Multistate Lottery Association has announced an interesting new game that isn’t so much about the money. Rather, some of the prizes, and the game itself, are meant to appeal to football fans. The details of the game, called X’s and O’s, haven’t been revealed at press time, but in partnership with the National Football League, a couple of prize ideas have been considered, such as a suite at the Super Bowl and announcing a draft pick from the NFL Draft podium for a winner’s favorite team. Of course, cash will be part of the prize structure, including a jackpot. One detail has been divulged: Instead of numbers, tickets buyers will pick eight of the 32 NFL teams.

Vegas condo sale set record

A new real estate record in Las Vegas was set when a condo located at the Summit Club in Summerlin sold for $21 million. The deluxe 5,000-square-foot five-bedroom, 5.5-bathroom penthouse is on the top (third) floor of the Club, but still has expansive views over the valley. It was bought in 2023 by a “tech and gaming investor” for $9.4 million, who never moved in due to construction delays; the buyer purchased the whole shebang, “right down to the silverware.” You can see photos on Realtor.com.

Horoscopes for March 2026

ARIES (MAR 21-APR 20): There's a shift this month that moves your attention into the liminal realm. You'll find that guidance and wisdom are coming from the nocturnal world of dreams. Don't dismiss the benefits of letting your mind wander. Critical downloads happen behind the scenes.

Lucky Days: 8 - 20
Lucky Numbers: 22 - 46

TAURUS (APR 21-MAY 21): The world might feel a tad too unreliable for you right now. Your ruling planet is moving through a zone that can disrupt and waylay your routines. Avoid overanalyzing annoyances. Stay on point by asking others for clarification if communication becomes garbled.

Lucky Days: 9 - 12
Lucky Numbers: 9 - 19

GEMINI (MAY 22-JUN 21): You've landed in a paradox this month when you must struggle to describe the indescribable. Try merging your intellect with your intuition. How? Artistic endeavors are the best way to benefit from this challenge. Writing, drawing, painting, or any musical outlet will hit the right note.

Lucky Days: 3 - 29
Lucky Numbers: 22 - 57

CANCER (JUN 22-JUL 22): You'll be called on this month to bring some of your nurturing and soothing skills to those in your circle that need it most. The world might feel on the verge of falling apart, but you know this is simply one phase in a regenerative cycle. Help others connect with this insight.

Lucky Days: 5 - 15
Lucky Numbers: 6 - 33

LEO (JUL 23-AUG 23): If you've ever had a shot at winning an Academy Award, this is the month to do so. Now that you're putting the finishing touches on a number of the projects you've supported since the start of the year, your sense of drama (and achievement) is amplified. You've arrived! Claim your accolades with pride.

Lucky Days: 8 - 18
Lucky Numbers: 33 - 38

VIRGO (AUG 24-SEP 23): The New Moon on the 18th initiates a major reassessment of your relationships. You may feel keyed up now, with your temper simmering. Channel that energy in ways that don't cause damage. If confrontation becomes unavoidable, lean on the tact and diplomacy that come naturally to you.

Lucky Days: 8 - 19
Lucky Numbers: 22 - 44

LIBRA (SEP 24-OCT 23): The cosmos has you under a microscope now as you take on more responsibilities. This marks the start of a two-year maturation process. While growth can be uncomfortable at times, what you're seeking in partners or mates becomes possible only when you make deeper commitments to yourself.

Lucky Days: 2 - 12
Lucky Numbers: 44 - 46

SCORPIO (OCT 24-NOV 22): You're feeling dreamy and otherworldly this month. The new Moon on the 18th opens the door into a world of extra-sensory perception. You've always had a strong connection to the supernatural side of life, but now you're ready to discover the undiscovered.

Lucky Days: 7 - 18
Lucky Numbers: 34 - 58

SAGITTARIUS (NOV 23-DEC 21): Concentration was difficult to come by last year. Your pull toward the abstract and the unreal left practical matters neglected. But this month you're ready to get your feet back on the ground and grow. Translate inspiration into action—everything depends on it.

Lucky Days: 8 - 13
Lucky Numbers: 9 - 19

CAPRICORN (DEC 22-JAN 20): How to let your whimsical side stretch while still honoring the serious side of your nature? Don't pit one part against the other. An opposition like this demands a creative solution. See if you can play at something that also holds financial rewards.

Lucky Days: 19 - 23
Lucky Numbers: 2 - 44

AQUARIUS (JAN 21-FEB 19): It's time to dissolve old assumptions and opinions. Stay open to new ways of seeing. Even if those revelations reshape your world. It's all good. You've been waiting for a far-reaching shift to open new doors for you. Well, now that moment is here.

Lucky Days: 5 - 28
Lucky Numbers: 22 - 50

PISCES (FEB 20-MAR 20): As Mars moves through your sign, you're asked to operate in a tempo that runs counter to your usual free-flowing nature. This is great news for those with an artistic bent; this month favors creative projects that require a willingness to go where angels fear to tread.

DEAR PAWS: I have two laid-back cats, my boyfriend has a big sweet dog named "Gabriel," and we are moving in together in a few weeks. Gabe is very well socialized and he spent his puppyhood in a big house with cats, so I'm not worried about him adapting to a new situation. But I'm not sure how my cats will react. How can I make sure life will be low-stress together? — Chase T. in Atlanta

DEAR CHASE: You have a great advantage in that your boyfriend's dog is already used to living with cats.

Before your move-in date, gradually get the cats familiar with Gabriel by bringing him over for a few hours, several days per week if possible. Before his arrival, create a safe space for the cats where they can retreat.

Once Gabe is settled and calm, have him lie down, with your boyfriend keeping hold of his leash. Bring each cat out, one by one, in your arms, and calmly approach him. When the cat tenses up, hisses or tries to escape, stop and take a few steps back. Stay far enough back that your cat remains calm in your arms but can see the dog. After a few minutes, take your cat back to their safe space and repeat with the other cat.

Repeat this process on each visit to minimize stress and trauma for the cats and the dog. A calm, consistent approach will help.

Fruit (cocktail) cake

Dear Ask Annie,

A friend told me there is a recipe for a fruit cocktail cake. I would love to try it. Have you ever heard about this recipe? Thank you. — Lynne F., from Philadelphia

Dear Lynne,

I went to a ladies' luncheon a couple of years ago. We were served a fruit cocktail cake. I asked my friend for the recipe. This recipe is easy and very tasty. Enjoy! — Annie

FRUIT COCKTAIL CAKE

- 1 ½ cups flour (regular not self-rising)
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 can fruit cocktail (15 oz.)
- 14 ounces fruit juice (orange or pineapple)
- 1 large egg
- ½ cup chopped pecans
- ½ cup brown sugar
- Whipped cream

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Using a large bowl, blend the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add the fruit cocktail, fruit juice and egg. Stir all ingredients until well blended. Celebrate together

Dear Guy,

I have had an amazing run of good luck at Bingo recently. Unfortunately, I think it has caused a little friction between me and my Bingo buddies.

At first I was all “Woo-hoo!” and “Eat my dust!” when I won two pots in one night. They laughed and were pretty cool about it. Then a couple weeks later I won a big pull tab and split another pot. I did my “Woo-hoo!” thing again, but this time they all kind of just half smiled and didn’t say too much.

So now I’m stumped. Are they mad because I made too big of a deal about winning? Are they jealous because I won and they didn’t? Shouldn’t I be able to be as excited as I want to when I win at Bingo? Or am I supposed to be all ho-hum and pretend like it’s no big deal? — Big Bucks in California

Dear Big Bucks,

It’s a tricky business when you hit a winning streak at Bingo and your buddies have to sit there and watch it happen. If these guys are truly buddies, then they should be happy you’re winning. If they act otherwise, it’s either because they may not be the friends you thought they were, or—and I’m leaning toward this second observation as the right one—you may have celebrated your winnings just a little too forcefully and ticked them off.

Did you simply act happy at your good fortune, or did you rub their noses in it? Was it really just a generic “Woo-hoo!” or was it more of a “Woo-hoo, check it out losers, I rule and you drool!” If the latter was the case, then what you did was squander their opportunity to be happy for you by making them annoyed by your behavior. Put simply, you were a poor winner.

In a group competition like Bingo, where there is typically only one winner, it’s very important to be gracious when you win. Remember, in the process of your winning, 150 other people lost.

Of course, it’s OK to be excited—you know how funny it is to watch someone lose control of themselves and scream or laugh or do their version of the happy dance when something exciting happens to them. But you should also know how annoying it is when someone turns a win into some kind of victory and everyone else’s defeat. I believe the phrase you used was “Eat my dust.” You’re basically kicking dirt in their faces and expecting them to enjoy it. Not gonna happen.

And so, Big Bucks, my advice is to enjoy your winning streak, and encourage your Bingo buddies to enjoy it WITH you, by letting them be part of the excitement of your win and not victims of it.

Sure, they’re going to be a little jealous. Heck, the whole Bingo hall is. Be joyful but try not to make their envy any worse. — Guy

Hey guys! (And gals!) Write to: Guy’s Turn c/o The Bingo Bugle, P.O. Box 527, Vashon, WA 98070, or e-mail the editor at tara@bingo.bugle.com. Be sure to include your name and address (you may request that your name not be published), as typically Guy will not include anonymous letters in his columns.

Veterans Post

Raising puppies

If you’re looking for a project that will provide big benefits to a disabled veteran, you can do no better than to raise a puppy.

Yes, a puppy. A small, young dog. Puppies who end up as service dogs for disabled veterans aren’t born that way. They need a solid first year of socializing and basic obedience, and that’s where you come in, should you want to take on this worthwhile project.

Take a look at www.guidedog.org/ puppy for an explanation of what is expected. If accepted as a puppy raiser, you would receive a very young puppy and spend the next year getting it socialized and used to different environments, with good house manners and basic obedience, and exposed to various situations to give it confidence.

If you’re not sure you can commit to such a long project, see the link above for other possibilities: short-term fostering to provide socialization opportunities for the puppy, co-raising with another individual or family, and in some states there is a prison puppy program that has inmates raise and train the dogs during the week before handing them over to weekend volunteers who provide experiences outside of the prison walls.

Your next step is to go online to search for groups near you that provide trained dogs to veterans in need. Contact them to ask about becoming a puppy raiser. (For more incentive, see www.vetdogs.org for the list of states where weekend volunteers are needed now.)

If you love dogs, perhaps the hardest part of the whole project will be to give up the dog at the end of its time with you when it goes on to its official training to be a service dog for a specific veteran in need. But you’ll console yourself knowing just how valuable your efforts have been in giving a good start to a dog that will be a life-changer for a veteran.

Keeping tabs on tabs

Dear Aunt Bingo,

One of our local Bingo halls has started not showing what prizes are still available for pull tabs, and for coin and 13 boards they are not showing how many winning numbers have been signed up for. I understand that they are trying to get people to buy tickets even if there is only one prize remaining, but I don’t think it’s right to hide that information, as I think anyone buying those tickets should have an idea of their odds of winning when they purchase tickets. Is there anything in the rules that requires them to disclose this information? This one hall is the only place that does this. I have stopped buying them because I may be purchasing a ticket that has absolutely no chance of winning. — MMR, via e-mail

Dear MMR,

You are not the first player to voice such a concern. And I have sat in more than a few Bingo halls with players grumbling that the management refuses to introduce a new pull-tab series until a major portion of an old series has been sold—regardless of how few prizes remain.

Between you and me, I kind of keep an eye on it myself, and if a series seems to be played out, I’ll stop buying until a new series begins. That said, I’ve been skunked a couple of times by not buying into pull tab series I thought were done, only to see a $1,000 prize go to someone else. That hurt!

I’m glad you appreciate that most halls are selling these pull tabs to make money for charity, and of course would like to sell as many as possible before starting a new series. I’m afraid I do not know what the specific laws are governing sale of pull tabs as they vary from state to state; I do know that sellers are generally required to track wins and mark off the prizes as they are won on the flare (poster) for the game, particularly of prizes over $20; and that each state has regulations in places as to when a series can be pulled.

But I suspect that all the hall is really doing is trying to do its best to make as much money as possible from each series. (Readers: feel free to share your thoughts on this topic.) — Aunt Bingo

The continuing adventures of Bingo John

The one from the woods comes out of the woodwork

Last time we were with Bingo John he was hiding in the animal shed spying on an unsuspecting family.)

Yes sir, I'm here to tell you lyin' in a pig sty is a hard way to start off the day. The dirt and grime gets down in your skin and sucks it dry. That is why pigs are always wallowin' around in the mud. The juice keeps them good and moist. But for normal folks, it dries out your skin like an over-done cherry pie. I put up with it 'cause it was the only place where I could keep up with my new family.

Through the cracks in the chinking, I could see everything they were up to—all their daily activities, the cleaning, the cooking, all the things people do in their day to day lives. The father, being blind, sat on the porch all day with the sun on his face while he waited for his daughter to come and go. After I'd been there for about a week, I learned why she left every day. Not only did she go to work, but she went to visit her son at a local hospital. He was disabled. He did not walk or talk. He only stared blankly ahead, expressionless. The doctors did not know what was wrong, and the only thing that got him excited was televised Bingo.

"During Bingo," she said to her Pa, "He comes to life again. The hospital even set up a table for him to play. It is crazy, but he wins every game he plays."

I knew that this was the family for me. Not only was the daughter a beam of sweet light, but her son responded to the world through Bingo.

"Yeah, Pa," she said. Her eyes opening wide like blue water pouring in a vase. "There is something magical happening. He won again. He won all three games and the championship!"

Then she took out a big wad of bills that her son won.

"I told you," said her father. "I told you the One from the Woods was looking out for us."

She stroked his head then put the money in a cookie jar.

After she left the next day, I crawled out and did some of the chores around the place—chopped wood, tilled the garden, pulled weeds, patched the roof, etc. She did not notice the things I did at first, but as they added up she got nervous. That night at dinner she asked the old man about it.

"Who's been out in the yard?" she asked.

"I told you. It's the One in the Woods. He came back. I hear him sometimes in my sleep. I can feel him. He's real close. Almost as if he's watching us right now."

"You're scarin' me, Pa. You started with that foolishness after Peter left. After our son...you know, the accident and all."

"I ain't trying to scare you. You can see it. You can see the results of his work," he said, pointing around the room with a withered finger. Then they both looked at my spot. Right at the dark crack I was peering through. Even the old man looked like he could see me.

"That's foolishness. You got one of the neighbors to help out."

"You know none of the people around here will step foot on this place. They say we're cursed. That something came out of the swamp to teach us a lesson for something we did. They blame us for the way little Pete ended up."

Then my sweet, sweet girl turned her head down like the weight of the world was pressing down on her shoulders. In the light of the single bulb I saw a tear sliding down her soft cheek. I wanted to reach out and touch her shoulder, to lift all her problems away. Right then and there I decided to crawl out of my spot and introduce myself. Problem was, I was in the woods so long, I forgot what a sight I was. I was covered in dirt and grime. My beard was long and greasy. My clothes were threadbare and falling off, and my skin was a dark crust like a burned marshmallow. I looked like some sort of swamp beast.

After a few moments of consternation, I decided to crawl outside anyway. Halfway out, I heard the both of them screaming and hollering like the whole house was on fire. I scooted back to my spy hole to see what happened. In the time I was thinking about introducing myself, they turned on the tv and her son was playing televised Bingo. Somehow, he was on the show, and won the giant jackpot. So, I scooted back out of my hole and ran to the front door, hoping they were happy and distracted by their winnings. When I knocked, everything got quite inside. I could hear the old man say it was the One from the Woods. The door slowly creaked open and there she was. Not two feet away, the most beautiful woman in the world. Her eyes and my eyes met, and we both froze for a moment. Then her eyes, like two perfect pools of blue water, drained out of her face, and she passed out, right into my arms.

"Who is it," cried the old man.

I decided to play along. "It's me. The One from the Woods"

"I knew it. You're the one responsible for everything."

"Yes sir. I've not met a more deserving family."

Then she started to move. The TV was on, and they'd just broke into the nightly news. Right across the screen, bigger than a pie plate was the face of Sarah-Mae. She was with the Sheriff's department, and they were looking for me. Sarah-Mae was clutching a picture of the two of us on the World Championship Bingo Cruise and cryin' like a baby. I looked at the screen then looked down at my sweet, willow lass. Her eyes came open, and she asked, "WHO ARE YOU?"

Next month, Bingo John tries to figure out his next move now he knows Sarah-Mae is looking for him.

Use the correct poker bet size when playing "No-Limit" Texas Hold'Em

A common mistake many recreational no-limit hold'em players make is regularly choosing the incorrect bet size. The game is called "no-limit" for a reason! If you consistently use the same bet size in relation to the pot in all or most situations, you are certainly leaving money on the table.

The most common bet size used by many players is a bet of roughly half of the size of the pot. If the pot is $10, they bet $5, while the optimal bet may actually be $3, $8, or $15 (or some other amount), depending on the situation.

For example, suppose in a $200 buy-in tournament, you raise from middle position to 500 at 100/200/200 with the AdKd and only the player in the big blind calls. If the flop comes Kh7s2d, you should use a small bet because pretty much no matter what your opponent has, he is in terrible shape. Also notice that you are not susceptible to being outdrawn too often.

It is also somewhat difficult for your opponent to have a strong hand that can call large bets on the flop, turn, and river. So, in this situation, you should bet small, 300 into the 1,300 pot. While there may not seem to be much of a difference between a 300 and 600 bet, you will find your opponent calls much more often when facing the smaller bet size, allowing them to make mistakes on the turn and river.

If instead the flop came KhQs8s, you should bet much larger, say 1,100 into the 1,300 pot. On this board, your top pair is quite vulnerable. Any Q, J, 10, 9, 8, or spade could easily improve your opponent to the best hand, and other random cards may also be bad when they give your opponent a disguised two pair. It is also reasonably likely that your opponent has a decently strong hand that can call a large bet, like a King, Queen, or draw.

As a quick tip, when the board contains a flush and/or straight draw but no flush or straight yet, you should tend to bet on the larger side with all your hands that want to bet. You should bet smaller when the board is either very coordinated — when there is already a straight or flush possible — or totally uncoordinated (such as K-7-2).

Bet sizing is by far the most difficult aspect of no-limit hold'em. Next time you are playing, be sure to constantly ask yourself, "What do I want my bet to accomplish, and does it do that?" You will find that generic half-pot bets simply do not get the job done.

Siegfried & Roy series

An Apple TV series about Siegfried and Roy is taking shape. According to People magazine, Wild Things: Siegfried & Roy, will chronicle the duo's rise to fame. Jude Law is playing Siegfried Fischbacher, with Andrew Garfield as Roy Horn. Variety wrote, "The duo push the concept of illusion versus reality to the extreme, personally and professionally, until tragedy reframes and opens a mystery surrounding their last fateful Las Vegas show." Some filming was reportedly done in January at El Cortez. The series is expected to premiere late this year or early next.

Golden Gate tour

A guide took 8NewsNow, the local CBS affiliate, on a tour inside "the guts" of the Golden Gate, as part of the 120th anniversary celebration of Las Vegas' oldest hotel. The news crew went to the basement of the building, where a large room might've been the site of a bar during Prohibition and could be turned into something public someday. They also viewed a fountain hidden in what's now a back alcove of the building that dates to the earliest days of the hotel, Vegas' first building with running water.

New food at Area15

The Review-Journal reported that Area15 will add nine eateries to its existing roster of a dozen or so, all in the second quarter of this year. The new places will be Alien Pizza Party, The Bowl (with high-tech robots preparing the food), Chilangos Tacos, Cosmic Pretzel, Fuku (from Momofuku's David Chang), Good Company Burgers, Museum of Ice Cream, Nacho Daddy, and Saint Honoré Doughnuts & Beignets.

James Taylor to play

As part of a 29-date tour, legendary singer-songwriter James Taylor will appear for two shows at the Chelsea Theater at the Cosmopolitan on May 9 and 10. Taylor will be accompanied by his long-time All-Star Band, featuring six musicians and three backup singers.

New Gold Coast restaurant

At press time, a new restaurant was set to open this month at the Gold Coast. Charter 75 Modern Kitchen will serve breakfast, lunch, dinner, and cocktails; the website also mentions live entertainment and a late-night happy hour.

Hogs & Heifers Outpost reopens

Hogs & Heifers Outpost has reopened at the Plaza. The popular biker-themed bar was kicked out of its former 20-year location at Third and Ogden when its lease finally ran out in early July, after which the owner bought the vacant lot at 307-319 S. Main St. across from the Plaza. When the Sand Dollar Downtown closed at the Plaza in December, H&H made a deal to open a pop-up bar for..well, so far for as long as it takes to open the new place across the street.
