Super's Report

Phil Hottmann
Division Superintendent

We just finished off the year with recent trips to Rockford for the joint meet and to East Troy for our Rail Fan Trip.

Both trips were very enjoyable. We had almost perfect weather both days. John Haverberg worked his magic and pieced together a number of elements to create this trip to East Troy, and everything seemed to work just as he planned it. Thanks again to John for all of his work.

In Rockford, we were well represented by the SCWD. They presented an interesting clinic involving paper models made from card stock. The card stock was printed from downloads from the internet. We are considering this method for our modeling contest for next season. When visiting one of the layouts on the Rail Fan Trip there was a layout with four structures produced from paper. I was able to locate two of them, but did not find the other two. I was somewhat surprised that I did not identify the others.

Rockford provided two excellent layout tours. We first stopped at Jim McQueeney's layout featuring both standard and narrow gauge. The layout is impressive due to Jim's prolific work. Each time we visit this layout we are treated with extensive amount of new work.

Our second stop was at Dick Caudle's. I think this was the first time I have seen this layout. Dick's water front scenes are just incredible. I was so impressed with some of his ships I am now considering adding one of these scenes on my own layout.

I hope to see you at the picnic on July 13!

AP Corner

AP Chair

When I decided to pursue being a serious model railroader over 50 years ago and joined the NMRA, I was a teenager who thought building models would be a breeze. Those were still the days of cardstock freight car sides, paper buildings and using all sorts of household-found items as modeling material. Detail parts were crude and few in number and scratchbuilding was mainstream. I tried my hand at a coal tower for my American Flyer layout using quarter inch plywood and scrap pieces from my godfather's woodshop. Suffice it to say, it turned out exceedingly bad. There weren't a lot of plastic kits available, so I tackled a Varney Casey Jones 4-6-0 kit, then, after finding a Canadian Railway Models O&W boxcar kit at a Niagara Frontier Region convention, I tried my hand at some real construction. The car came out pretty well, including full brake rigging which was not part of the kit. It got a Third Place at an NFR convention contest.

Would it win a merit award today? I doubt it—there was no AP program back then so merit awards weren't something I strove for. Over the last few decades, the proliferation of plastic car and structure kits and greater demands on our time have made scratchbuilding seem not only difficult but tedious. Many of us have a hard time getting a layout built, let alone building cars and structures to populate it. And many of us think we don't have the skills to build from sticks of wood or styrene.

I started building a tool house for my then-Sn3 railroad with a merit award in mind. I carefully began cutting wood, pre-staining and painting, and carefully gluing it together. I think it went very well, but then, I burned out after the Madison National and it still waits to be finished. However, that attempt improved my skills at cutting and assembling a wood structure. Now I am trying to overcome my fear of working with styrene—a work still in progress—but I am learning how to apply some of the same techniques I use with wood to the styrene.

My point is, your first attempts at a craftsman kit or a scratchbuilding project may not be an award winner. But if you approach it as a learning experience and are not afraid to chuck a bad job out and start again, one day you will look back on your efforts and realize you have learned to become a better modeler. Do what I do—ask other SCWD members for advice on how to do things. Our three active MMRs, Bill Ehlert, Bob Wundrock and Al Potts, will be happy to provide suggestions. And bringing that model in for merit award judging is a great way to find out where you can improve your models in response to the judges' comments. Remember, you're not competing against anyone but your own skills. It doesn't have to be a big or complex model. A simple model will get you started so the lessons learned from the judges will help you when you are ready to create that model of your hometown depot or the house where you grew up.

Start small and simple, build your skills, get feedback. I still intend on finishing that tool house even though I am no longer in Sn3. I want to know what I did well and how I can do better. And as an added benefit, I might get some of the requirements for an AP award completed at the same time.

The Clinic Corner

Bob Wundrock
Clinic Chair

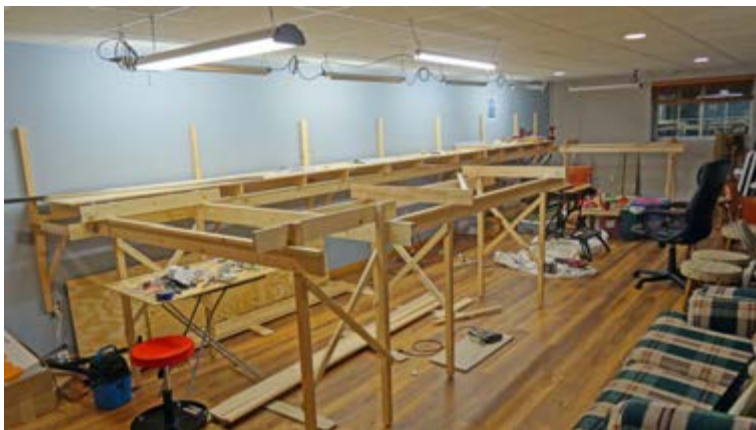

Because summer will be here soon, (so I am told), we may have thoughts of other than model railroad activities. I'm still trolling for clinicians.

I currently have September, October and November clinics scheduled. I also have a plan for December, although the clinician doesn't know it yet. I'll twist his arm yet this week.

The February through May 2020 clinics are not yet clear (a bit of irony there). So, if you have a subject and material of which you can present for 45-55 minutes, please contact me...sooner than later. I work on the schedule months in advance.

I've also learned that an SCWD member's layout is planned to be featured in the September Model Railroader. Keep an eye open for that.

Several of you have asked if I was building a new layout. Yes I am. I have the supporting L-girders and some plywood already in place (photo below). I may be starting on trackwork before the end of summer...budget permitting.

I'm also still looking for an interested member to train as the Clinic Chair.

See you,

Bob (rwundrock@yahoo.com)

Youth Group

Steve Brist

The SCWD Youth Group had a demonstration of a small live steam engine at the May meeting. One of our members, Lloyd, showed us how a fire makes steam and how steam can be made to do work. We then discussed how this related to the operation of prototype steam locomotives. Lloyd is an active member of the Rock River Threshere and the Riverside & Great Northern Railway. Last fall, he completed "Steam School", a training program on the safe operation of steam tractors and other equipment. Thank you Lloyd for an interesting program.

Since this was the last meeting of the school year, we also finalized our plans for the summer. The SCWD Picnic is July 13, and we hope to also visit the steam railroad roundhouse before the picnic at Little Amerricka. Members are reminded that the registration for the summer picnic is due on July 5th, the Friday the week before the Picnic. Our members also voted to take the summer field trip to Midcontinent Railway Museum and the Riverside & Great Northern Railway at Wisconsin Dells in August.

We want to thank our adult volunteers who have helped us throughout the year, including Jerry Lawler, Steve Preston, Bob McGeever and Paul Balfe. They have all been a big help. Paul Balfe was again at our meeting and spent quite a bit of time troubleshooting a member's HO steam engine. We appreciate all our adult volunteers.

We also discussed to possible idea of having separate programs for our older and more experienced members. We will be looking into this and we may need more clinics and volunteers to make this work.

And thanks again to the SCWD for sponsoring our Youth organization. The SCWD literally pays the rent for us. We don't charge dues, but we hope we pay back what we receive in the form of more interest and participation in the model railroad hobby. Happy Railroading!

See you then!

Steve

Contest Column

Dave Down and Dave Lendved, Co-Chairs

A quick thank you to all of you who submitted contest entries during the past 9 months. We had a good year with contest entries, especially in the photo contest.

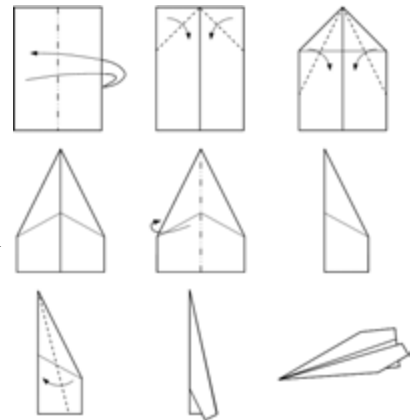

In 2017-18 there were seven contest months compared to six contest months in 2018-19. There were 59 photo entries in 2017-18 and 170 entries in 2018-19. There were 135 model entries in 2017-18 and 81 entries in 2018-19.

The Popular Vote Model and Photo Contest themes have been published for 2019-20 and we hope you have been making your plans for each contest. The contests will resume in September with the theme "Favorite Train". We can learn all sorts of new things by sharing what we know and finding out what other modelers are doing. Have a great summer.

Modeling Project

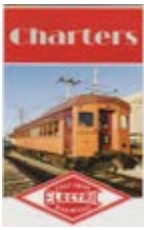

Phil Hottmann and Dave Lendved, Co-Chairs

We are considering utilizing paper models for our modeling project this year. Although they have a reputation for being rather cheap looking, we have seen examples of some compelling work. On our recent Rail Fan trip, we visited an O scale layout that features four structures built from printed card stock. I was only able to spot two of them. I think you may be able to do some interesting things if you combine these paper elements with other materials such as wood and plaster castings.

Since the world is going digital, it might make sense to embrace some of the available technologies which make it possible to download building designs that you can print on paper stock and make your own building. We would provide the digital file for you to print out and create your own masterpiece. This also may appeal to the younger members or the youth group.

SCWD 2019 Spring Railfan Trip Report

On Saturday, May 4th, SCWD sponsored a railfan trip to East Troy Railroad Museum followed by tours of three home layouts in the Whitewater and Ft. Atkinson areas. Attendees got to ride on a charter 14 mile round trip from East Troy to Mukwonago and back on a vintage electric trolley. The ride included two stops for run-by photography and a visit to their new maintenance shops. A presentation on the history and facilities of the Museum had been made by Evan Richards from the Museum at the February 2019 SCWD regular meeting. It turned out that Evan was also the motorman for the trolley ride. Following lunch at Culver's in Whitewater, the group toured Paul Balfe's HO Great Northern RR and Ed Erdman's large O-scale Hi-Rail layouts in the Whitewater area and Skip Streng's On3 Isle Royale Cooper Mining RR in Ft. Atkinson. The layout modeling was all inspiring; the weather was great for a change, and lots of photos and videos were obtained by many during the day. Following are a few of those photos from Mike Vivion.
