TEACHING AND RESEARCH:

- 8/14 - present     Assistant Professor of Sociology and Program Director, Latin American and Latina/o Studies (LALS). Since joining CCNY/CPS I have contributed four new courses all cross-listed with LALS, namely: "Latin American Women and US Immigration"; "Daughters of Immigrants: Social Mobility & Inequality"; "Blancas, Negras & Morenas: Gender and Race in Another America," and, "Racialization: Single Mothers, Sexual and Religious Minorities." In addition to mentoring students, I supervise independent studies for majors in Sociology, LALS' and International Studies. As Program Director for LALS (2015-2016), I worked closely with the Colin Powell School Dean's Office and the Office of Students' Success to revise LALS' Bulletin and plan its newly instituted four- semester course schedule. I also worked to increase the hiring and mentoring of new adjunct professors and increase their participation within LALS.
- 7/16- present     Invited, Faculty and Research Fellow. Universidad Centroamericana in Managua, Nicaragua (UCA). Two main outcomes from this collaboration have been, an international conference focused on return migration, "Cultura de Hospitalidad: El Retorno a la Comunidad de Origen" (July 2016), held at the UCA_Managua's campus and a week of forums dedicated to social justice and immigrant youth held at City College, Hostos Community College and NYU (February 20-24, 2017).
- 9/12 – 6/14     Visiting Research Fellow. Princeton University/Sociology Department's Center for Migration and Development (CMD), Princeton, NJ. Worked in collaboration with Professors

Edward Telles and Marcelo Paixao to complete preliminary research analysis for a co-authored paper comparing the role of race and gender in the history of nationhood formation in Brazil and the Dominican Republic (writing in progress). Also, worked closely with Professor Telles as co-instructor for his year-long advance, graduate seminar on Ethnicity, Race and Development in the U.S. and Latin America (2012-2014). Collaborated as co-author with senior Professor Marta Tienda, in the publication of an article published October 2014 by the Annual Review of Sociology (ARS).

- 1/04-8/12      Assistant Professor. Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Fordham University, Bronx, NY. Graduate Teaching: “Sociology of New U.S. Minorities”; “Contemporary Immigration Issues”; “Migration, Microfinance and Poverty: theory and practice.” Undergraduate Teaching: Eloquencia Perfecta (EP I) “Seminar in Immigration, Gender and Identity Formation”; “Introduction to Sociology: The Sociological Imagination”; “Sociology of Inequality/Why Effects: Class, Race, and Ethnicity”; “New and Old Minority Groups in the U.S.” and “Latina Women: Immigration and Inequality.” In addition, I contributed to the teaching and curriculum (graduate and undergraduate) of the Latin American and Latino/a Studies Program (LALSI); the Urban Studies and African American Studies Program and the Institute for International Humanitarian Affairs’ (IIHA) MA Program. Collaborated with the development of the M.A. program for LALSI and IIHA; and, served as affiliated faculty at other academic institutions in Europe and Latin America.
- 9/09-5/10      Research Associate/Member, Advisory Scientific Committee for remittance and migration project, “Migracion, Remesas y Desarrollo: El Impacto de Genero, Raza/Etnicidad y Clase.” Directed by Drs. Irene Browne; Mary Oden (of Emory) and Dr. Silvia Irene Palma C. and Carol Lisseth Giron S. of INCEDES Institute, Guatemala City. Emory University, Atlanta. GA.
- 7/08 –0/10      Co-Principal Investigator for Fordham’s CIP/Unit on Migration, Gender and Development. New York-Mexico Migration and Remittance Corridor Project, Fordham University- Center for International Policy Studies (CIPS) UCLA-NAID Funded by the Packard Foundation with matching grants from IDB, IFAD and Fordham University GSAS’ Faculty research grant: part of a six-city study on how transnational families in both ends of the US-Mexico corridor transfer and use remittances.
- 9/06 – 6/07      Postdoctoral Research Fellow. Immigrant Mothers and the School Aspirations and Choices of Moroccan and Dominican Daughters in Amsterdam and New York City University of Amsterdam, Center for Immigration and Ethnic Studies (IMES). Financial support provided by the National Science Foundation and the Social Science Research Council. This study is part of a larger cross-national study on the Children of Immigrants in Schools (CIS) which examines the education and labor market integration of Latino and North African youth in the US and Europe. A main outcome of this study is a co-authored paper with Maurice Crul and collaborators, which appears in, The Imperative of Integration (edited by Richard Alba and Jennifer Holdaway, NYU Press, spring 2013), an unpublished report presented to the NSF and SSRC; and a solo-authored paper (now in review) and research data for a second book project.
- 8/99 - 5/01      Associate Director/Research Evaluator. New York City HOPWA’s Health Housing and Technical Assistance Evaluation Project, Columbia University Mailman School of Public Health. This evaluation project was a collaborative venture between Columbia University’s J.L.M. School of Public Health and Bailey House Inc., directed by the Post-graduate Center for Mental Health and The NYC Mayor’s Office. The main objective of this project was to assist 18 local, HOPWA grantee agencies with capacity building and evaluation training for delivery of supportive housing and health services to the HIV/AIDS afflicted population in NYC. A co-authored report based on the study's findings appeared as an electronic publication of Columbia University's J.L.M. School of Public Health in 2005.

- 4/97 – 12/99 Field Research Director. The New York City Immigrant and Social Welfare Project, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace- International Migration Policy Program. This longitudinal research project addresses the impact of welfare reform on immigrant families and communities in the cities of New York and Los Angeles during the post 1996 reform years. The project's main objective is to evaluate the effects of post-1996 Welfare and Immigration Reform Laws on impoverished immigrant groups, mostly single head of household Dominican and Mexican women and their families living in New York City and Los Angeles. A second part of the study examines the role of local and state agencies in assisting immigrants.
- 9/94 - 12/98 Research Associate – Yonkers' Housing and Community Study. Columbia University - Teachers College, Institute for Urban Minority Studies. The "Yonkers' Housing and Community Study" was funded by the Ford Foundation and sponsored by Columbia University Teachers' College Urban Minority Institute. In addition to responsibilities as Research Associate, I directed a smaller, research subcomponent on alcohol-related attitudes and expectancies among Latino families and their children living in public housing.
