Any Hope from the Babylonian Exiles

In the ninth year of Zedekiah's reign, on the tenth day of the tenth month, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon marched against Jerusalem with his whole army. He encamped outside the city and built siege works all around it. By the ninth day of the fourth month the famine became so severe that there was no food for the people to eat. Then the city wall was broken through the gate between the two walls near the King's garden, though the Babylonian army surrounding the city. They fled toward the Arabah, the Babylonian army pursued the king and overtook him in the plains of Jericho. All his soldiers were separated from him and scattered, and he was captured. He was taken to the king of Babylon at Riblah, where sentence was pronounced on him. They killed the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes. (2 Kings 25:1-7)

"& on the banks, on both sides of the river, there will grow all kinds of trees for food. Their leaves will not wither, nor their fruit fail, but they will bear fresh fruit every month, because the water for them flows from the sanctuary. Their fruit will be for food, and their leaves for healing."

Swamp of living creatures will live wherever the river flows.

There will be large numbers of fish, because this water makes the salt water fresh; so where the river flows everything will live.

Fishermen will stand along the shore, from En Gedi to En Eglaim there will be places for spreading nets. (Ezek. 47:9)*

- A person stands on a rocky cliff, arms raised in a gesture of triumph or prayer, silhouetted against a vibrant sunset sky. The landscape is a vast mountain range with snow-capped peaks and dense evergreen forests. The sun is low on the horizon, casting a warm, golden glow over the scene. The sky is filled with soft, colorful clouds in shades of orange, pink, and purple.
