Conformance Executive to Speak at PCI Community Meeting

RENO, Nev., Sept. 19, 2018 -- (Business Wire) -- Conformance Technologies, a fast-growing provider of operating systems, education systems and expertise used in managing business compliance requirements, today announced Executive Vice President of Risk and Investigations Rick Heroux will speak at the upcoming Payment Card Industry Security Standards Council's (PCI SSC) 2018 North American Community Meeting, Sept. 25-27, at The Mirage Las Vegas.

Small merchants are suffering devastating security breaches at an alarming rate. "Security with My Fries, Please. How to Help Small Merchants Protect their Businesses," scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 27, should prove to be a spirited conference session. Besides highlighting the plight of these merchants, the session details how payment processors and service providers can best protect small merchants, while explaining new resources available to help that the Council has recently made available.

Heroux will join moderator Lauren Holloway, the Council's director of standards coordination, as well as fellow PCI Small Business Task Force members and session panelists Jenna Hutt, retail technology specialist for Rocky Mountain Chocolate Factory, and Laura Knapp Chadwick, director of commerce and entrepreneurship for the National Restaurant Association.

The PCI SSC is a global forum that develops, maintains and manages PCI Security Standards which include the Data Security Standard (DSS), Payment Application Data Security Standard (PA-DSS) and PIN Transaction Security (PTS) requirements. The North American event brings together Council staff and industry experts to share the latest in security strategies, cover standards updates review the latest technology advancements.
