PREFACE

This publication presents a general framework for the administration of various development codes and ordinances. It is meant to be used in an advisory capacity only and should not be construed as a legal interpretation of the requirements and procedures of specific codes and ordinances or of the State Statutes. Before being used, the suggested forms contained herein should be reviewed by community officials and attorneys, and modifications made if necessary to fit individual needs.

Special acknowledgement is given to the University of Illinois Bureau of Community Planning - A Guide for Municipal Zoning Administration by R. Marlin Smith, Clyde W. Forrest, Jr., and Eric C. Freund - which was used as a major reference source for this document. For more discussion of the various zoning actions, it is suggested that one consult “ZONING – Handbook for Municipal Officials” with suggested forms, by Ronald S. Cope.

CHAPTER I
INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

The purpose of this manual is to provide local officials with a general guide for administering the various development regulations adopted by their respective community or municipality. It describes the types of codes which may be used and presents samples of application forms, notices and letters which are needed to administer these codes. Included also are explanations of the various forms, their purpose and when they should be used.

SCOPE

The forms and procedures set forth in this publication are limited to the major (or most commonly adopted) development codes. These include zoning ordinances and subdivision codes. Other codes, such as planned unit development codes, mobile home park codes, sign regulations, etc., are sometimes adopted as separate ordinances, but are more often included as part of the Zoning Code. Therefore, the forms and procedures in this manual discussed under Zoning Code administration also apply to these types of developments.

Furthermore, all of the forms included in this publication are intended to be samples only, and as such, are very general in nature. Any community which does not have the needed application forms, certificates, etc., or any community which wishes to revise their existing forms may use these samples as is, or they may modify the forms to fit their particular needs.

CHAPTER II

ZONING ORDINANCE ADMINISTRATION

The Zoning Code is perhaps the most important administrative tool which a community has at its disposal. With proper administration it can help guide development so that growth occurs in accordance with the community's adopted land use plan. (See 65 ILCS 5/11-13-1 to 5/11-13-20)

AUTHORITY AND PURPOSE OF ZONING

The authority to adopt zoning regulations is granted to municipalities and counties by state statute for the purpose of:

...promoting the public health, safety, morals, comfort, and general welfare, conserving the values of property throughout the municipality, lessening or avoiding congestion in the public streets and highways, and lessening or avoiding the hazards to persons and damage to property resulting from the accumulation or runoff of storm or flood waters... (See 65 ILCS 5/11-13-1)

The Zoning Code does this by regulating the use of land and the location, height, bulk, coverage, and use of buildings and structures on the land. Any structures to be built, except those to be used for agricultural purposes (which may be exempt from zoning regulations) must be approved by the Zoning Administrator and/or Building Inspector.

FUNCTIONS OF ZONING ADMINISTRATOR

The functions of the Zoning Administrator include:

- (1) Providing zoning information.
 - (2) Receiving and reviewing applications for zoning permits.
 - (3) Issuing zoning compliance permits.
 - (4) Inspecting sites where zoning permits have been issued.
 - (5) Issuing occupancy permits
 - (6) Investigating violations.
 - (7) Updating the zoning map and text.
 - (8) Providing advisory reports to the Zoning Board of Appeals, Plan Commission, or corporate authority, as appropriate.

APPLICATION FOR PERMITS

Zoning Compliance

Before construction of any building or structure, an Application for Zoning Compliance must be completed and submitted to the Zoning Administrator. This application must be signed by the owner of the property in question or his authorized agent. Among the information to be included with this application is a legal description of the property and a site plan showing the proposed location of the building on the lot (See Exhibit 1 and Illustrations 1 and 2). Specialized forms for certain types of structures, such as signs or towers, may be used when more detailed information is wanted. An example of a form for a sign installation permit is shown in Exhibit 2.

If the proposed structure meets the requirements of the Zoning Code, the Zoning Administrator approves the application by signing the certificate of zoning compliance (See Exhibit 1) and the applicant may then apply for a building permit. (In some communities, applications for building and zoning permits may be combined.)

If the Zoning Administrator determines that the proposed structure does not meet the requirements of the Zoning Code, the application is denied. In this situation, if he has sufficient grounds, the applicant may ask for an interpretation of the provisions of the Zoning Code by the Zoning Board of Appeals or he may apply for a variance or an amendment, whichever may be appropriate for his particular situation.

Non-Conforming Use Certificate

A non-conforming use is a building or activity which is not a permitted use in the zone district in which it is located, but which was in existence before the Zoning Code was adopted. Such uses are generally permitted to continue in operation for a specified time period or until the activity is terminated, or the building destroyed. For example, a gas station located in an area which was subsequently zoned "Single-Family Residence" is a legal non-conforming use which may continue in operation, passing from one owner to another, until it goes out of business, is destroyed by fire, razing, etc., or is otherwise removed from the property, or until such time as is permitted by the Zoning Code.

After a Zoning Code has been adopted by a municipality, the owner of any property which does not conform with the area-bulk or use regulations of the zone district in which it is located may apply for a Certificate of Non-Conformance (See Exhibit 3). Included with this application should be documented evidence that the non-conforming use existed before the Zoning Code was adopted. Deeds, mortgages, contractual agreements, building permits, tax records, etc., may be used as such evidence. If, after reviewing the application and inspecting the site, the Zoning Administrator determines that the non-conforming use was in existence prior to adoption of the Zoning Code, he may issue a “Certificate of Non-Conformance” (See Exhibit 3). This certificate protects the property owner by insuring him of the right to continue his non-conforming use.

These certificates are also often a prerequisite for obtaining a loan from banks or other lending institutions to purchase a Non-Conforming Use.

Appeals

An appeal is a request to the Zoning Board of Appeals to review a decision of the Zoning Administrator which is deemed improper or in conflict with the Zoning Code. An appeal may be made by any aggrieved person within forty-five (45) days of the action being appealed. Although not defined in the enabling legislation, an aggrieved person is usually an applicant whose request for a permit has been denied; however, the term may also apply to a person having an interest in property adjacent to or near the site for which a permit has been issued.

This appeal does not require a public hearing. The applicant must, however, provide the Board of Appeals with information such as shown in Exhibit 4, explaining how his interpretation of the Zoning Code differs from that of the Zoning Administrator. If the Board of Appeals rules in favor of the applicant, the Zoning Administrator is instructed to issue or revoke the permit, as the case may be. If the Board of Appeals rules in favor of the Zoning Administrator in the case of his denial of a permit, the applicant may apply for a variance or amendment, whichever is appropriate, if he has sufficient grounds to do so. If the Board of Appeals upholds the Zoning Administrator’s issuance of a permit, the only other recourse for the aggrieved person is the courts.

Area-Bulk Variance

An area-bulk variance is a relaxation of the strict application of the zoning regulations pertaining to lot size, setback, parking requirements, etc. The purpose of this variance is to provide relief for a property owner in cases where the zoning regulations impose an undue hardship. For example, if a man wants to build a house, but the lot on which he wants to build has a deep gully across the back which prevents him from meeting the required front yard setback, he may request an area-bulk variance to reduce the required front yard setback enough to permit his house to be built.

In order to obtain an area-bulk variance, a public hearing must be held before the Zoning Board of Appeals. The applicant applies for a variance by completing the appropriate forms describing his “hardship” (see Exhibit 5) and submitting them to the Zoning Administrator. A site plan showing the applicant’s lot and the minimum variance which would permit the proposed structure must be included with the application (see Illustration 3) along with evidence substantiating the hardship, such as topographical maps, engineering reports, photographs, etc.

Use Variance

A use variance is an exemption from the use regulations of a zoning district. Since they usually involve only small parcels of land, use variances often have the same effect as spot zoning which has been ruled improper by the courts (see discussion of “spot zoning” in section on zoning amendments). If a change in use is justified, a zoning amendment should be used to avoid abusing the authority to grant use variances and to maintain the original purpose of the zoning districts.

Special-Use Permit

A special-use permit allows the development of certain facilities, such as hospitals, schools, nursing homes, mobile home parks, etc. These may be public service uses which cannot be classified in a separate and distinct category of their own or may be desirable uses within a given district which exhibit certain problems that must be minimized. Therefore, they are allowed, after special scrutiny and review, in certain districts where they are compatible with permitted uses. For instance, schools and churches may be designated as special uses in residential districts since they ordinarily would be compatible in these neighborhoods; mobile home parks and nursing homes may be special uses in multiple-family residential areas since they are also medium or high density residential functions; or a landfill could be a special use in an industrial district.

Special area-bulk regulations are usually established for these special uses. Furthermore, these developments must be reviewed at a public hearing by the Zoning Board of Appeals/Plan Commission who may impose additional conditions or restrictions on the development if needed to make it compatible with the surrounding area. For example, if the reviewing body determines that a proposed mobile home park should be screened from adjacent property, they may attach a stipulation to the special-use permit that the developer install a fence or plant shrubbery along his property lines.

Before application may be made for a special-use permit, certain conditions must first be met. These conditions are as follows:

- (1) The subject property must be appropriately zoned for the proposed development.
- (2) The special-use must be expressly identified in the Zoning Code. Various special uses may appear in one or more use districts, but no special use can be granted in any use district unless it is set forth as a special use under the terms of that district in the text of the Zoning Code.
- (3) The provisions of the Zoning Code which govern the granting of the special-use permit must be followed exactly.

If these initial requirements are met, the applicant may complete the form shown as “Exhibit 6”, “Request for Special-Use Permit”.

This application is then submitted to the Zoning Administrator along with a site plan of the proposed development (see Illustration 5). This site plan should clearly show that the area-bulk regulations for this type of special-use will be met. This site plan and any other data needed to describe the layout and feasibility of the proposed development should accompany the application.

Zoning Amendments

A zoning amendment is a change which is made to the Zoning Code in either the text of the Code or in the Zone District Map, and usually it is the latter which is involved. Amendments should be made in the public interest and not merely for personal gain. Amendments may be requested by the governing body, the Board of Appeals, or other interested persons if revisions are needed in specific sections of the Zoning Code for clarification or to add or delete certain provisions. Unless the Code is very poorly written, there should be very few amendments made to the text. Occasionally, a number of changes may be needed in a Zoning Code, and in these instances, the municipality may wish to undertake a complete revision of the Zoning Code.

Most requests for zoning amendments will involve changes in the zone districts on the zoning map. Persons wanting to use their land for purposes which are not permitted by the existing zoning category will often request that the property in question be rezoned to a category which does permit the proposed use. Such requests for rezoning should be based upon one of the following reasons:

- (1) the original zoning was in error;
- (2) the conditions of the area have changed since it was zoned to such an extent as to warrant rezoning.

It is the applicant’s responsibility to provide evidence that one of these two conditions exists and not the responsibility of the reviewing body or an opposing neighbor to prove the reverse.

When granting zoning amendments, the reviewing body should be careful to avoid spot zoning. “Spot Zoning” is the classification of a small piece of property in a zone district different from that of surrounding properties and has been proclaimed to be an improper type of zoning by the courts. This ruling is based on the opinion that the separate zoning of a single parcel is generally to the benefit of one person rather than for the public good. An example of spot zoning might be the commercial classification of a half-acre lot in a residential area for the location of an auto body shop. This situation would be beneficial only to the owner who could purchase the lot in the residential area at a much lower cost than one in a commercial area. If, on the other hand, a small district in a residential area was zoned commercial to permit retail operations which would benefit the entire neighborhood, such as a small grocery store and/or laundromat, such zoning may be proper and acceptable.

In order to obtain a zoning amendment, a public hearing must be held. The applicant applies for a zoning amendment by completing a form, such as shown in Exhibit 7, describing the type of amendment he is requesting and submitting it to the Zoning Administrator. If a change in the zoning map is requested, the application should be accompanied by a site plan of the proposed development showing its compatibility with surrounding properties and its relationship to surrounding zone districts (see Illustration 6). This data and any other evidence to support the rezoning request must accompany the application.

Instructions to Applicants: The purpose of an area/bulk variance is to provide relief to a property owner when the strict enforcement of the zoning regulations pertaining to lot size, setback, parking requirements, etc., impose an undue hardship on him or deny him the reasonable use of his land. For example, a lot which has a deep gully running across the back of it could make it difficult to build a house which meets the front yard setback requirements.

After completion of this application, which must include a site plan as described on the attached sheet and documentary evidence of the hardship pleaded (e.g., engineering reports, topographical maps, photographs, etc.), a public hearing will be scheduled within a reasonable time by the Zoning Administrator. A notice of this hearing must be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the local area at least fifteen (15) days before the hearing and the publication cost must be paid by the applicant prior to the hearing. The applicant will be notified by mail of the time and place of the hearing at least ten (10) days prior to the hearing date. The applicant or his attorney or his duly authorized agent must appear at the hearing and present his case to the Board of Appeals.

Hardship to the applicant is the crucial test. Variations will be granted only to provide relief in unusual situations which were not intended or foreseen when the Zoning Code was adopted. Economic loss is seldom a unique situation and is generally not considered a valid hardship.

PROCEDURES FOR PROCESSING APPLICATIONS

The following procedures have been developed as part of the administrative system for the operation and administration of a Zoning Code. The procedures outlined are drawn from the Zoning Act of the State of Illinois and set out basic steps that should be taken and considerations that should be made by municipal officers and bodies in acting on applications.

Applications that do not require any action other than the Zoning Administrator's approval and do not require a complicated procedure and processing should be routine. Applications requiring action by the Zoning Board of Appeals only should normally be processed within thirty (30) to sixty (60) days, depending upon the date of submission. Applications of greater complexity may in some cases require more time, but if procedures are followed, processing should require ninety (90) days or less. As experience is gained, this time period may be reduced. In any case, issuance of building permits and processing of other applications should be contingent upon the provision of all needed information by the applicant and the payment of all required fees and advertising costs.

ZONING COMPLIANCE AND BUILDING PERMIT PROCEDURES

I. Applicant Files for a Zoning Compliance and/or Building Permit

Applicant fills out application providing all information and supplementary data required and then submits completed application to the Zoning Administrator.

II. Review by Zoning Administrator

- A. Application is checked for compliance with:
 - (1) Zoning regulations.
 - (2) Building, plumbing, electrical, and other codes, if any.
 - (3) Municipal code requirements.

- B. Application is checked to determine if:
 - (1) Particular hazard or danger to public health or safety is involved.
 - (2) Special authorization is required by some other department, such as:
 - (a) Board of Appeals
 - (b) Plan Commission
 - (c) City Council (or Village Board)
 - (d) Other local or state officers

- C. Any special authorization required becomes part of the application for a building permit.

- D. Upon completion of review, one of the following actions will be taken by the Zoning Administrator:
 - (1) If the application is in full compliance, the Zoning Administrator should proceed to issue the zoning compliance and/or building permit.
 - (2) Notify applicant of other requirements or approvals necessary for compliance.
 - (3) Notify applicant that the application does not comply with the regulations or is incomplete and return the application.

IIIa If Application is Approved

- A. Zoning Administrator authorizes payment of fee to the Municipal Clerk.

- B. Municipal Clerk issues receipt to applicant and deposits fee in Municipal General Fund.

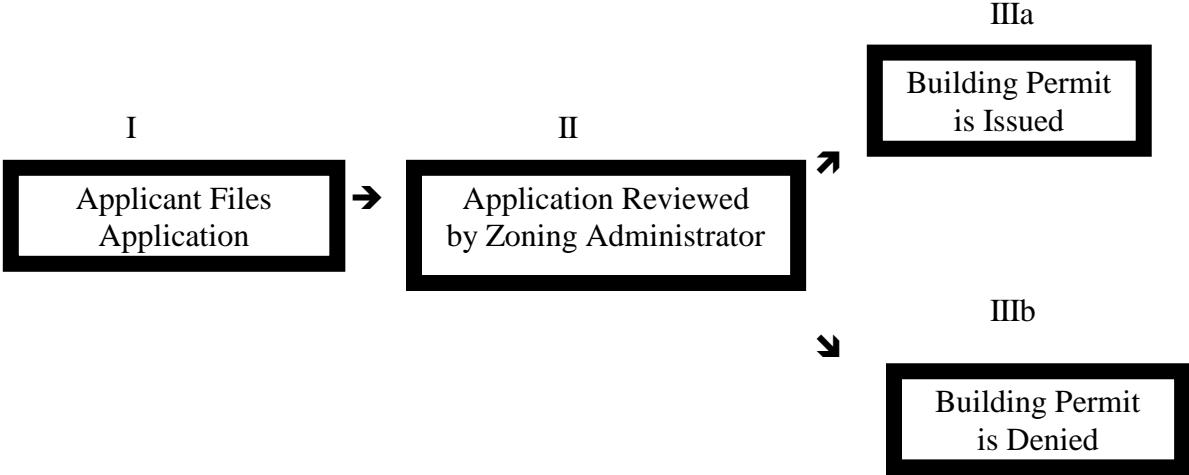

- C. Applicant presents receipt to Zoning Administrator for permit issuance.

- D. Zoning Administrator issues Certificate of Zoning Compliance and/or Building Permit.
- E. Zoning officer files application, including supplementary data and records permit number and type of land use with the record system.
- F. Zoning Administrator prepares a monthly summary report on permits issued and denied, fees collected, and total cost of improvement which is then submitted to the Mayor, City Council/Village Board, and the County Assessor.
- G. The summary report shall contain:
 - (1) Building permit number.
 - (2) Type of improvement.
 - (3) Location.
 - (4) Estimated cost of improvement.

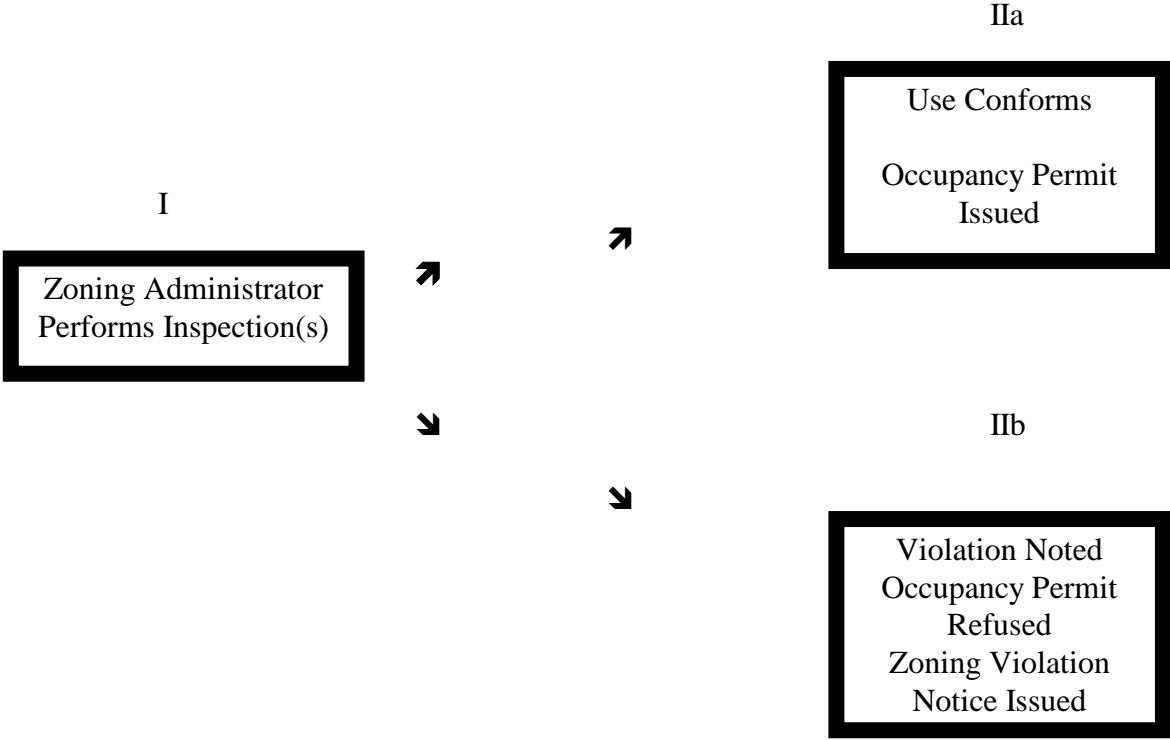

IIIb If Application is Rejected and Applicant Desires to Appeal

- A. Applicant may file an appeal for interpretation.
- B. File a request for a variance.
- C. File a request for a special-use permit or a planned building development.
- D. File a request for a zoning amendment.

ZONING COMPLIANCE/BUILDING PERMIT PROCEDURE

CERTIFICATE OF OCCUPANCY PROCEDURE

CERTIFICATE OF OCCUPANCY PROCEDURE

I. Building Permit Application is Processed and Building Permits Issued

- A. Zoning Administrator performs routine inspection for compliance by applicant to the Zoning Code or to conditions specified by a special-use permit or variance as follows:
 - (1) First inspection should be made at the time the foundation is staked out, but before construction is started to make sure that the building meets setback and other locational requirements.
 - (2) A second inspection may be made after the foundation has been completed.
 - (3) Final inspection to insure compliance of the completed improvement or use is made upon completion of the building and before the Occupancy Permit is issued.

IIa If Use Complies With All Requirements:

- A. If no violation is noted on the first inspection, Zoning Administrator informally notifies applicant to proceed with construction requesting applicant to contact him upon completion of construction of foundation and upon completion of building.
- B. Upon completion of construction, applicant notifies Zoning Administrator; if use complies with requirements, an Occupancy Permit is issued.

IIb If Use Does Not Comply With All Requirements:

- A. If the Zoning Administrator determines the use is in violation, he shall take action to correct the violation.
- B. Zoning Administrator shall take any or all of the following actions--each action must be in writing to the applicant and the person(s) causing the violation.
 - (1) Order the violation to be corrected within a specific period of time.
 - (2) Issue a "stop work" order, ordering all activity to stop until the violation is corrected.
 - (3) Order, through the Municipal Attorney's office, prosecution of the violator(s).
- C. Applicant may appeal the Zoning Administrator's decision to the Zoning Board of Appeals (see Appeals Procedure).
- D. Upon correction of the violation or upon written order by the Board of Appeals, the Zoning Administrator may, as the state of construction warrants:
 - (1) Authorize the applicant to proceed with the construction of the use.
 - (2) Issue a Certificate of Occupancy.

APPEALS PROCEDURE

I. Applicant Files Appeal

- A. Applicant fills out application providing all information and supplementary data required and then submits completed application to the Zoning Administrator.
- B. Upon completion of review by the Zoning Administrator, one of the following actions shall be taken:
 - (1) The Zoning Administrator will notify the applicant to proceed with the application and will transmit a copy of the application to the Board of Appeals.
 - (2) The Zoning Administrator will return the application to the applicant with a notice that the application is incomplete.

II. Appeals Heard by Board at Regularly Scheduled Meeting

- A. The Board of Appeals should hear an appeal within the time prescribed by the Board in their bylaws and the Secretary of the Board should notify the parties of interest, in writing, of the time and place of the meeting.
- B. Appeals may be filed by any person, organization or agency with a definable and stated area of interest, and/or in the course of the Board's determination of a matter officially before it. However, such interpretation should be made with deliberate consideration of applying the interpretation to all similar matters which may subsequently come before the elected or appointed officials of the municipality.
- C. Generally, appeals will be of four types:
 - (1) Interpreting the exact location of zone district boundaries on the zoning map.
 - (2) Interpretation of the written provisions of the Zoning Code (when the meaning is not clear) within the stated "intent and purpose" of the Code.
 - (3) Interpretation of "similar use provisions" to define which uses, not otherwise named, are permitted in a zoning district.
 - (4) Interpretation of the "most restrictive requirements", when the provisions of two or more regulations or ordinances apply to a matter.
- D. Once an interpretation is rendered by the Board, the interpretation shall generally be considered a part of the Code. Therefore, the interpretation should be broad in nature with consideration given to similar cases that may appear before the municipality. Such interpretation shall stand unless that provision of the Zoning Code is amended or until the interpretation is officially changed by the Board of Appeals.

PUBLIC HEARINGS

Before any variation or amendment can be made to any Municipal Zoning Code, a public hearing must first be held by the Zoning Board of Appeals or the Plan Commission. The power to grant variances and special-use permits has been retained by the governing body thus giving the Board of Appeals an advisory role only. Requests for various zoning amendments or special-use permits shall be heard by the Zoning Board of Appeals, and, final approval of requests for amendments is reserved to the city council or village board.

Notice of Hearing

Upon receiving a completed application for a variance, special-use permit, or zoning amendment with all necessary site plans and supplementary data, the Zoning Administrator schedules a public hearing. The hearing should be scheduled within a reasonable time after receipt of the application as specified by the Zoning Code. Notice of the hearing must be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the municipality at least fifteen (15) days, but not more than thirty (30) days before the scheduled hearing date. In municipalities having a population of less than five hundred (500) and in which no newspaper is published, notice of the hearing may be posted in three (3) prominent places in the community. The public notice should state the time, date, and place of the hearing as well as a brief description of its purpose (See Exhibit 8). The applicant must bear the cost of publication, and this fee should be paid before the public hearing.

Notice to Applicant and Surrounding Property Owners

In addition to publication in a newspaper, a written notice of the hearing should be sent to the applicant and to surrounding property owners (See Exhibits 9 and 10). It is recommended that this requirement be included in the rules for the Zoning Board of Appeals. Surrounding property owners may be defined as owners of property adjacent to the subject property or as owners of property within a given distance of the subject property, such as two hundred fifty feet (250'). Such written notice is especially advisable in rapidly developing areas.

Another means of notifying neighboring property owners is by posting a notice of the hearing on the property in question. Posting is not required by State Statutes, but may be specified in certain Zoning Codes. This notice should be placed near the front lot line facing the street and should be large enough to be visible from the road.

Testimony

Any interested person may appear and be heard at the public hearing. This includes, besides the applicant, residents of neighboring properties, civic and community groups, and any other persons who may be affected by the proposed action. If these interested parties cannot or do not wish to appear in person, they may be represented by an attorney or a duly authorized agent.

Testimony presented at the hearing must be given under oath, and an accurate record of this testimony should be kept. If the case is ever taken to court, it is essential that a reliable record of the proceedings be available for review. The record of the proceedings should include the names and addresses of all witnesses and, if testimony has not been taken down verbatim or recorded on tape, it should be summarized as accurately as possible by the Secretary of the Board of Appeals. The minutes of the hearing must include an account of the Zoning Board's examination of witnesses and each member's vote or failure to vote on each question coming before it.³ These minutes and other actions of the Zoning Board are public record and shall be kept on file in the office of the Zoning Board.

Notice of Hearing Results

Within a reasonable length of time, the Zoning Board of Appeals shall decide cases which have been heard and notify the applicant of its decision. If the case was dismissed or continued for any reason, a letter such as outlined in Exhibit 11 shall be sent. Exhibit 12 is an example of a notice which would be sent in an appeals case, and Exhibit 13 presents a notice which is to be sent after a hearing for a variance or amendment. It is also desirable, although not required, to notify other interested persons who may have given testimony at the hearing of the decision of the Zoning Board and final disposition of the case.

Decisions and/or Advisory Reports

Each decision of the Zoning Board of Appeals must be accompanied by a finding of fact. In the case of variances and special-use permits, this is prepared in the form of a report to the corporate authorities, which makes the final ruling on such actions. Exhibits 15, 16, and 17 are samples of advisory reports containing findings of fact.

³ Illinois Compiled Statutes, Chapter 65; § 5/11-13-3.

The findings of fact should set forth a basis for granting the variation, special-use permit, or zoning amendment. Too often, this report offers only generalized conclusions of the findings (such as, “the strict enforcement of the Zoning Code would create a hardship for the applicant”), rather than pointing out specific reasons for granting the request. If the case is ever contested, the specific reasons upon which the Zoning Board's decision was made will be on record and can be used by the court as a basis for determining whether that decision was warranted.

Before deciding on a variation from the Zoning Code, the Zoning Board of Appeals must find that:

1. the property in question cannot yield a reasonable return if permitted to be used only under the conditions allowed by the regulations in that zone;
2. the plight of the owner is due to unique circumstances; and
3. the variation, if granted, will not alter the essential character of the locality.⁴ (See Zoning Code)

All three of these conditions must be evident to justify granting a variance. Factors to be considered by the Zoning Board when deciding a case are listed in Exhibit 17.

In the case of zoning amendments, the Statutes do not provide standards upon which the Board of Appeals should base their decision. However, the courts have held that amendments should be granted only when they are in the public interest. In order to aid the Zoning Board members in reviewing requests for zoning amendments, a checklist of factors to be considered should be developed and used. Such a checklist is presented in Exhibit 18.

Ordinances

The governing body of a municipality makes final disposition of request for zoning amendments and may reserve approval of other zoning permits to the governing body. This is accomplished through the passage of ordinances by the corporate authorities. Since the enabling legislation does not require particular procedures in considering zoning amendments and variations, the governing body may follow its usual procedure in passing these ordinances. Sample ordinances for variances, special-use permits, and zoning amendments are presented in Exhibits 19, 20, and 21.

⁴ Illinois Compiled Statutes, Chapter 65, § 5/11-13-4.

VIOLATIONS OF ZONING CODE

Violations of the Zoning Code are reported to the Zoning Administrator whose responsibility it is to enforce the Zoning Code. These violations are sometimes observed by the Administrator himself, but more often are reported by complaining neighbors or by inspectors hired by the municipality for this purpose.

Complaint of Violation

When neighboring residents or other interested citizens wish to report a violation, they should be required to put their complaint in writing. Doing so insures that a record of the complaint will be on file for future reference if needed. It also helps to avoid unnecessary inspection trips in the case of nuisance calls and should eventually reduce the number of such calls. A sample complaint form is shown as Exhibit 22. After receiving a written complaint, the Zoning Inspector or the Zoning Administrator should inspect the property in question.

Notice of Violation

When the Zoning Administrator observes a violation of the Zoning Code, he should post a Zoning Violation Notice on the structure in question and inform the owners and/or occupants of the alleged violation. Exhibit 23 shows a sample notice of zoning violation. If the violation is not corrected or a variance or zoning amendment is not applied for within a reasonable time after notification, the Zoning Administrator should send a second notification such as that given in Exhibit 24. If corrective action is still not taken after this notification, the case may be turned over to the State's Attorney or the Municipal Attorney for prosecution.

CHAPTER III

SUBDIVISION REGULATION ADMINISTRATION

The subdivision forms contained in this chapter were designed to simplify the subdivision review process and provide the municipality with a complete file for later reference, enforcement and inspection. The forms presented will have to be adapted for municipal use depending upon specific code requirements and established procedures. The forms were designed to be quite exhaustive in order to encompass most of the regulatory directions that a well written Subdivision Code may take.

AUTHORITY AND PURPOSE OF SUBDIVISION REGULATIONS

Subdivision regulations deal with the definition of requirements and the provision of assurances to provide services and facilities to be met by a prospective developer in the preliminary stages of development. The origin of subdivision regulations is related to the fulfillment of specific state legal requirements for the registration and transfer of land. It has been held by the courts that plat registration is a privilege rather than a right; therefore, a state, through the use of its police power (or a municipality, through enabling legislation), may attach various conditions to be satisfied before allowing the plat to be recorded.

The major purpose of subdivision regulations is to require the developer to provide at least a minimum amount of necessary improvements such as adequate streets, storm and sanitary sewer systems, water systems, and the like, and to develop the area without unnecessarily destroying existing natural amenities such as trees, streams and wildlife. If these improvements were not required of the developer at the time of construction, the burden of providing such basic services and facilities would eventually fall on the local municipality.

FUNCTIONS OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER

The duties of the Administrative Officer include:

- A. Providing information concerning the Subdivision Code.
- B. Receiving and reviewing plats, engineering drawings, etc., to insure compliance with all requirements of the Subdivision Code.
- C. Forwarding copies of the plat to other reviewing officers.
- D. Writing advisory reports.

- E. Inspecting building sites.
- F. Investigating violations.

DESIGN CONSIDERATIONS PRIOR TO SUBDIVISION PLATTING

Understanding good subdivision design requires a thorough knowledge of the principles of subdivision planning. Subdivision planning is a process which includes the following procedures:

1. Site survey and analysis;
2. Sketch plan and development program;
3. Preliminary platting;
4. Utility engineering (improvement plans);
5. Final platting.

Step 1 represents the most critical stage of good subdivision planning. The site designer or subdivision planner may be the individual who owns the property, his engineer, landscape architect, land planner or even his architect. The developer and his land planner/designer should consult the municipal engineer or professional planner for their knowledge of the area to be developed and to obtain local standards and requirements. The Plan Commission or local engineer usually has on file, maps and basic information (topography, soils, utilities, etc.) which will be useful to the subdivision designer in his preliminary planning and program steps.

Illustrations 6 and 7 indicate the various factors which should be considered by the site designer during the process of developing his sketch plat. Illustrations 8 through 11 indicate the next stages in subdivision planning and are inserted after the forms prepared for each plan or plat.

APPLICATION PROCEDURES AND PERMITS

Sketch Plat

The sketch plat is intended to serve as an initial step in subdivision procedure. It provides the subdivider and planning board with an opportunity to discuss the subdivision proposal more or less informally, and provides a basis for classification. The sketch plat also provides the subdivider with the opportunity to correct any design or development errors without excessive and sometimes prohibitive costs.

The subdivider submits a complete sketch plat application such as shown in Exhibit 25 and sketch plat to the Administrative Officer at least two (2) weeks prior to the next regular Plan Commission meeting. The Administrative Officer then fills out a sketch plat technical checklist (See Exhibit 26) to insure that all information has been provided. The Administrative Officer then fills out an administrative checklist (See Exhibit 27) which specifies the procedures to be followed.

Preliminary Plat

The purpose of the preliminary plat is to give the Plan Commission some basis upon which to discuss improvements and the development plan, and to consider preliminary approval. The preliminary plat represents a clear indication of how the subdivider intends to develop the land, but allows for adjustments and revisions. It also gives agencies other than the planning board an opportunity to review the plans before development starts. The preliminary plat represents a relatively detailed picture of what the subdivision will entail and indicates to the subdivider what burdens he will have to assume in the way of improvements and utilities.

Before any tract of land may be subdivided, the developer must submit an application for tentative approval of his preliminary subdivision plat to the Administrative Officer (See Exhibit 28) who then insures that the plat is complete through the use of the preliminary plat technical checklist as shown in Exhibit 29. He then fills out the administrative checklist (See Exhibit 30) which specifies the procedures to be followed. The Administrative Officer also transmits the departmental evaluation checklist (See Exhibit 31) to all municipal departments who will be reviewing the preliminary plat. This checklist will provide for uniform, complete review of the plat and will identify any conflicts between the plat and any plans that the municipality may have.

Variances

In some instances, a developer may not be able to levelop his property according to the terms of the subdivision regulations. Perhaps part of his land may contain a steep slope which may dictate a cut to reduce the street grade. In this instance, he may want to reduce the right-of-way and/or street width requirements. To do this, he must apply for a variance when he submits his preliminary plat. The variance application and review form (See Exhibit 32) was designed to identify the specific code requirements to be varied, to state the reasons for the request, and to review the proposal as to its adequacy.

Improvement or Construction Plans

The purpose of improvement or construction plans is to give the municipality exact details as to how all improvements will be installed (i.e., streets, sewer and water lines, grading and filling, etc.). These plans may be submitted either prior to, or in conjunction with the final plat. Because of their technical nature, they are usually reviewed by the municipal engineer who forwards his recommendation to the Plan Commission and governing body.

The Administrative Officer, upon receipt of the plans, fills out a technical checklist (See Exhibit 33) to insure that the plans are complete. He then fills out the administrative checklist (See Exhibit 34) which specifies the procedures to be followed.

Final Plat

The final plat is a formal detailed map conforming substantially to the preliminary plat previously approved by the Plan Commission. Although the subdivider may submit a proposal for development of a portion of the subdivision tract, the final plat must conform to the subdivision regulations and any conditions set forth at preliminary approval.

The developer submits a final plat application (See Exhibit 35) and a final plat to the Administrative Officer who then insures that the plat is complete through the use of the technical checklist - final plat (See Exhibit 36). He then fills out the administrative checklist - final plat (Exhibit 37) which specifies the procedure to be followed.

The final plat administrative checklist also refers to the improvement plans and posting of the performance bond. This bond should be required in the event that the subdivision is abandoned by the developer; the bond is then cashed, giving the municipality enough funds to complete the necessary improvements.
