About Charlotte Butler's Town

Charleston, South Carolina was founded as Charlestown or Charles Towne, Carolina in 1670, and moved to its present location (Oyster Point) from a location on the west bank of the Ashley River in 1680; it adopted its present name in 1783. In 1690, Charleston was the fifth largest city in North America, and remained among the ten largest cities in the United States through the 1840 census. Charleston is known as The Holy City due to the prominence of churches on the low-rise cityscape, particularly the numerous steeples which dot the city's skyline, and for the fact that it was one of the few cities in the original thirteen colonies to provide religious tolerance to the French Huguenot Church. In fact, it is still the only city in the U.S. with such a church. Charleston was also one of the first colonial cities to allow Jews to practice their faith without restriction. The population was estimated to be 118,492 in 2007, making it the second most populous city in South Carolina closely behind the state capital Columbia.

Current trends put Charleston as the fastest growing central [what does this mean? It's not in the center of the state] city in South Carolina.

The city of Charleston is located just south of the mid-point of South Carolina's coastline, at the confluence of the Ashley and Cooper Rivers. Charleston's name is derived from Charles Towne, named after King Charles II of England. [These two sentences repeat what was said earlier, and should be cut]. America's most-published etiquette expert, Marjabelle Young Stewart, recognized Charleston 1995 as the "best-mannered" city in the U.S.

Bonnie Jourdan (Charlotte Butler) Bonnie is delighted with the wonderful role of Charlotte Butler, and finds that she relates to the character in many ways...especially the love of birds, dogs, bridge and dancing! This is her second production with Tony Gallo after playing Sister Angelina in Tony's production of Eugenio in last year's Fringe Festival and in the Mid Town New York Theatre Festival where she was nominated for best Supporting Actor. Theatre has been a large part of Bonnie's life for over seventy years from Hawaii to Puerto Rico and places in between while following her (now deceased) Air Force husband around, and she is so grateful to still have the mind and body to continue treading these boards for a little while longer.

Weinzimer, Rob (James Haywood and Jay) was seen most recently as the thin castaway in Ambassador Theater's production of Out at Sea. Earlier this year, Rob performed as Judge Alvin Haley in the American Century Theater's production of Native Son. Rob is a 2008 graduate of the Honors Conservatory program at The Theatre Lab School of Dramatic Arts in Washington, D.C.
