JOHN T. WHO?

The following Associated Press article with a dateline of Salem, Illinois was taken from the Peoria Journal Star, issue of March 8, 1984.

John T. Scopes' Apartment Unnoticed

Six blocks from the refurbished birthplace of the late politician and orator William Jennings BRYAN sits a vacant two-room apartment once the home of the man BRYAN helped prosecute in the Tennessee "monkey trial."

Unlike BRYAN's two-story white home, declared a national historical site and visited by tourists from as far away as Australia, the apartment where former Tennessee schoolteacher John T. SCOPES briefly lived goes almost unnoticed.

The reason for the contrast, said Mayor Charles L. McMACKIN, is simple: "Nobody would be interested" in visiting SCOPES' upstairs apartment in the 17-room red brick home at 310 N. Washington. The house, kept in good shape since it was built in 1833, now is owned by the mayor's aunt, who prefers not to rent out apartments.

It was almost 59 years ago that BRYAN, a former secretary of state and three-time presidential candidate, went to Dayton, Tenn., to help prosecute SCOPES. The young science teacher had admitted violating a state law prohibiting public school teaching of any theories that denied the divine creation of man as taught in the Bible.

Though found guilty, SCOPES later was cleared by the Tennessee Supreme Court. The tribunal said the lower court exceeded its authority when it fined him $100.

The 72-year-old mayor said it would not be worthwhile to open SCOPES' apartment to tourists.

Said McMACKIN: "His great moment was in that courtroom - period, end. William Jennings BRYAN extended beyond that courtroom in Dayton, Tenn. Anything you could connect with John SCOPES would have to be because of his association with William Jennings BRYAN, and there just isn't that much there."

If the town did want to recognize the apartment where SCOPES and his parents lived for no more than a year, McMACKIN said it would not be controversial.

"Everybody liked John SCOPES," he said. "I knew him. He wasn't all that bad a guy. As a matter of fact, he was coming here to unveil the monument (of BRYAN), and he died on his way up here."

McMACKIN said he always had admired SCOPES because he "stood up against a pretty powerful opponent...I admire the man for his stand and his right to make it."

Ironically, McMACKIN said it was BRYAN who delivered young SCOPES' commencement address at Salem High School in 1921. "They knew each other," he said. McMACKIN said the 20 to 50 tourists who visit BRYAN's home each month never mention SCOPES or the trial that ended five days before BRYAN died at age 65. As McMACKIN told a questioner who asked about SCOPES recently, "You're the first person that's even thought about the poor old guy, except me, who invited him to the unveiling."

(Footprints Editor's Note: It's rather too bad that Bryan's last public act was as co-prosecutor in the "monkey trial." Bryan had espoused the Fundamentalist cause in the Bible Belt, and foolishly allowed himself to be put on the stand as an expert witness. Scopes' lawyer, famed athiest Clarence Darrow, was a past master at cross examination, and his questioning was so intense that Bryan was publicly humiliated in front of the national press that had flocked to Dayton.)
