The Los Angeles Clippers LOVE CHEESE!

So...I've become a Los Angeles Clippers fan. David Winter of The Luxury Marketing Council introduced me to Glenn Griffith, who is the man to see about premium seating for the Clippers. He brought me in to provide The Cheese Impresario's Artisanal Cheese Tasting Adventure to a party at the Clippers' very cool Training Center.

We all had such a great time serving delights to premium ticket holders, team staff, and several of the players. Boy oh boy, did I feel short!

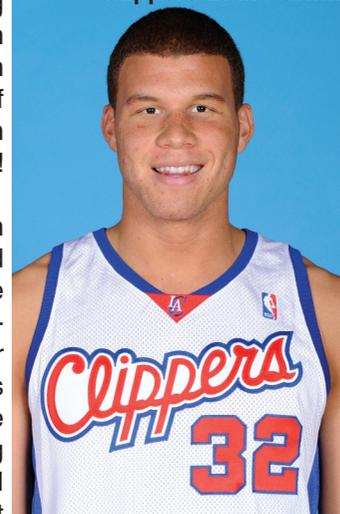

I had such fun sharing jokes and some terrific cheese with the very handsome Clipper player Blake Griffin. His mind is so fast, he had me laughing so much that I could hardly eat the cheese. It will be a thrill for me from now on to watch him on the basketball court next season. Blake loved Tony and Julie Hook's 10-year-old Wisconsin Cheddar cheese. He was also quite taken by Sartori's Raspberry BellaVitano—the very unique-in-the-world cheese that has been soaked in raspberry Bock beer.

There was a very special and heartfelt spirited "team vibe" happening at this tasty and very fun cheese eating party. Everyone was friendly and amazingly appreciative of everything that I brought. Party people like Pops and the Spirit Dancers all added to the festivities. Don't ask me about my experience going to a game and sitting courtside—you might want to kill me. I really can't wait until next season to cheer my fellow Cheese LOVERS onto victory. www.nba.com/clippers

On the same day Clippers Star, Baron Davis also showed a great appreciation for Wisconsin Master Cheesemaker, Joe Widmer's delicious Aged Brick Spread. Baron and I spoke about the thrill of cooking up some delicious burgers and then slathering them with this luscious and divine cheesy ultra-creation.
