

The practice of Dr. Sherly Soleiman specializes solely in cosmetic injectables. Dr. Soleiman regularly attends lectures and aesthetic conventions to stay on the forefront of the field of injectables. She is part of a select group of physicians that Allergan (maker of Botox and Juvederm Voluma) has chosen to instruct other physicians on the administration of their products. She lives near her office in Encino, with her husband and three children.

How do you distinguish yourself from the competition?

“We focus solely on cosmetic injections. No plastic surgery, biopsies, facials or lasers. This gives us a tremendous amount of experience in this field. We carefully monitor patient feedback, which has sharpened our ability to predict results on different facial structures. That way we can give unique, custom consultations for each patient.”

FAST FACT

Dr. Soleiman earned her medical degree from Loma Linda University School of Medicine in 1998 and spent her residency at University of Irvine.

What question or concern do you most frequently hear from patients?

“‘Will it look natural?’ Due to the inordinate amount of product misuse and misplacement, many patients are afraid of the ‘frozen’ or ‘over-done’ appearance from injectables. I can relate, as that actually happened to me a few years back; a doctor injected the wrong product in the wrong place. I looked awful, and I’ll never forget it. The key to a natural-looking face is proportion, moderation and understanding the dynamics of the facial movement. Most people aren’t aiming to look 16; they just want to look less tired, angry or sad. My goal is to make patients look refreshed and feel self-confident.”

What are some of the latest advances in cosmetic injections today?

“The newest cosmetic injectables on the market are Juvederm Voluma and Restylane Silk. They both have unique characteristics. Juvederm Voluma is an injectable gel that adds volume to the cheek area. It can be really effective at correcting age-related volume loss in the face. It can provide contour and lift for up to two years. Restylane Silk is a filler that can help smooth wrinkles around the mouth. Both products are FDA-approved, and my patients are really pleased with the results. As with all injectables, it is all about technique and knowing how to use the product.”

What should patients do prior to their first consultation?

“Consultations are free of charge. We do recommend that patients do not try any new procedures right before an important event. Some patients need several visits to see optimal results.”
